PREFATORY NOTE.

We take pleasure in presenting the second volume of the Loveland Genealogy to our subscribers. Whilst containing no more pages than the first volume, yet it has more than twice the number of families. We commend it to your consideration and hope that it may meet with your approval. As we look back upon the past year's labor many visions come crowding upon us: Of writing many letters, of posting hundreds of final circulars, of rewriting and condensing family history and family records, and lastly of weary waiting for letters that came too late to answer the purposes for which they were sent. We feel that no one can justly complain that he did not have time to consider his opportunity. We have recorded in these pages every Loveland family sent us of this branch, and omitted no allied family that has taken the least interest in the volume before going to press. Those omitted can readily determine their pedigree and the relation of their families to the others with little effort. Our excuse for any omission is that it is utterly impossible to make this volume exhaustive with the subscriptions sent us.

At a family reunion in Brighton, Illinois, in response to a toast Dr. Dickerson said: "The Loveland family, so far as my acquaintance extends, are well developed, strong and athletic, qualified to endure any physical strain they may be called upon to endure. The professions and vocations which many of them follow with success require stout and vigorous men and women. The physical qualifications of the family are fully re-enforced and supported by strong, mental ability. No undertaking ever failed with them for lack of will force to carry it through—quick to conceive an idea, ready to grasp and prompt to execute it. Nothing seems to afford them greater pleasure than the vigorous and successful prosecution of some laudable enterprise. Socially as a family they are unsurpassed—relatives, friends and neighbors are made welcome and feel at ease in their society. In social gatherings they vie with others to make strangers happy and comfortable. Their hospitality is all that can be desired—no one having been a guest at their homes ever felt unwelcome or regretted his visit. Their religious proclivities are apparent and marked—many have attained rank and distinction in religious circles, and all have maintained a high degree of veneration for Christianity and its teachings. With these elements of sound virtue widely diffused through their nature it is easy to conjecture the ‘possibilities of the Loveland family.’ Success must necessarily follow. No enterprise is too difficult for their energy. No difficulties are insurmountable, and no heights are too lofty for their aspiration. As a family they are equal to any and surpassed by none.”

In conclusion we submit the honor and fair fame of our family name, the high mental and physical culture of individuals and families, and their social and moral respectability and the influence of all for good in neighborhood and community to your sacred keeping. The strength of neighborhood, church and state rest upon the strength of homes. Every home is a foundation stone upon which they stand. If our homes fall to ruin, neighborhood, church and state will surely follow. If society, church and state derive their strength from our homes, then in proportion as our homes become vitiated by avarice, selfishness, intemperance, sensuality or other crimes, will society, church and state weaken or fall to ruin. Our immortal ex-president Hayes once said in a speech: “Let everyone who does wrong know that he wars not only against two generations, children and grandchildren, but against all the generations of coming time. Holy Writ says, 'unto the third and fourth generations.' It skips the 'second.' This accounts for some very good parents having bad children. Go far enough back in the ancestral line and we may find the source of all earth's turpitude."

Vol. II is not as comprehensive as we could have wished, and we fear does not show the time and work expended upon it. But these fragments will not have been recorded in vain if they lead but one youth to walk in the footsteps of worthy ancestors, and to rise up and call us blessed. Dear volume, product of wearisome but gladsome toil, go forth and take your place in the hearts of those we love. A feeling of relief steals over us, giving a precious glow to all our visions as we bid you go. We shall soon disappear, but we hope will not be forgotten, whilst you will live to arrest the eye of the wanderer, wherever he may be, and lead him to love, honor and protect the fair fame of the Loveland name. May you wield an influence for good that shall pass down the ages.

PREFACE.

The "Loveland Genealogy" had its inception at the Golden wedding of John⁵ and Calista (Curtis) Loveland, in 1881. At first we only thought to trace our own lineage. We knew but little of our series of ancestors, save that our grandfather, Joseph⁴, lived and died in Norwich, Vermont, and raised his family there. Our parents, his sons, emigrated at an early date—Elijah³ to Kingston, Pa., and John⁵ to New Haven, O. Whilst procuring the family records of our grandfather's descendants we were led to consult the Colonial Records of Connecticut, the Glastonbury Centennial and other public records of that State. From these we discovered that Thomas Loveland who was made Freeman of Wethersfield by the Court at Hartford, in 1670, was our ancestor; that in 1674 he was assigned lot 44, the last of the four score acres of land included in the first survey made in Connecticut. These farms lay in Wethersfield (now Glastonbury) adjoining Hartford on the south. From the Centennial we learned that large tracts of land lying in Glastonbury had been purchased from the Indians, from time to time, and distributed pro rata among the inhabitants according to the amount of taxes paid by them. Of these lands Thomas Loveland received eighty acres in 1674, one hundred and twenty acres in 1701, one hundred acres in 1704 and one hundred acres in 1707, besides sixty acres additional "for his good services in erecting the meeting house in 1693." He conveys to his son, John², in consideration of natural affection, by deed acknowledged Nov. 8, 1708, five acres containing house (Deed Book 2, page 65). For the same consideration he conveys one hundred acres to his grandson, Thomas³ Loveland, Jr., and his sons Robert² and John²—John² to have one-half or fifty acres; Thomas³, Jr., twenty-five acres adjoining John², and Robert² the remaining twenty-five acres.—Acknowledged Sept. 10, 1716 (D. B. 2, p. 119). We find no record of the disposition of his remaining estate. He must have died within a few years after making this last deed, as we find in 1723 Thomas Loveland, Jr., appears upon the records as Thomas Loveland, Sr.

Public lands were allotted to the children of Thomas Loveland: Robert², sixty acres in 1697, thirty-six acres in 1714, and eighty-eight acres in 1723; Thomas², Jr., thirty-six acres in 1714, and twenty-eight acres next to Hebron bounds in 1723; Samuel², fifty-eight acres in 1714, and seventy-seven acres in 1723; John², seventy acres in 1714, and fifty-three acres in 1723; Thomas Dickinson, husband of Mary² Loveland, sixty acres in 1698, and two hundred and twenty-six acres in 1714, he died in 1717; William House, husband of Hannah² Loveland, sixty-seven acres in 1714, and fifty-six acres in 1723; Benjamin Strickland, husband of Elizabeth² Loveland, thirty-six acres in Lubberland in 1714, and forty acres in 1723. Deeds were given for above allotments and recorded in the Town Records. The Centennial gives the family records of John² and Robert² and their sisters. If we have interpreted the records correctly, Thomas¹ Loveland, from whom we have commenced numbering our generations, had seven children. In all our searching among books and records we have been unable to find another Loveland who was his contemporary. There was a Peter Lolland, a sojourner in Boston in 1674 (Mass. Records), which may suggest the Saxon origin of the English and American Lovelands.

Our next step was to procure a copy of the births and marriages of Lovelands prior to 1800 from the records of Glastonbury and the other Connecticut towns. From these records we obtained many names, but they did not cover the half that should have appeared in them. Fortunately we secured the complete family records of several families, of four generations, our own being among the number, including the name, birth and marriage of our grandfather, Joseph¹ Loveland. We felt rewarded for our research. But what was to be done with the vast amount of accumulated material pertaining to the other branches, descendants of the children of Thomas Loveland? We felt it should be brought to the notice of their descendants. Our mission was evidently not completed. We searched the Hartford County Probate Records for the estates of the decedents, the Town Records of Hartford and Glastonbury for deeds, the Church Records for marriages, etc., and old grave yards for deaths. We were enabled to fill most of the blanks in the family records and fix the connections for four generations with the parent stock. From this, except in a few cases, it has not been difficult to determine the pedigree of the families of the subsequent generations. We visited in person Wethersfield, Middletown, Meriden, Berlin, New Britain, Kensington, South Glastonbury, Marlborough, East Glastonbury and New London, Connecticut, also Westerly, R. I., and Boston and Chatham, Mass. We next engaged in what seemed an almost impossible undertaking—the finding of the different families whose ancestors we had traced. We were fortunate. From Mrs. Elijah Wadhams of Wilkes-Barre, our neighbor, we obtained the address of Hon. Ralph A. Loveland of East Saginaw. From his wife, Mrs. Harriet M. Kent Loveland, we received the result of the researches of an antiquarian and genealogist employed by her husband in 1863. The manuscript sent us contained a reference to all the genealogical works then extant wherein the name of Loveland appeared. From the fragmentary records sent we were placed in communication with many families. The manuscript also contained data in reference to the early history of the family in this country, English Items, the family records of the descendants of Enos⁴ Loveland and an illustrated copy of the Loveland coat of arms made by herself and daughter, Mrs. Royce. We have not been able to verify all the matter contained in "English Items," Vol. 1, but print them essentially as given by said antiquarian.

Through our cousin, Charles E. Ensworth, of Norwich, Vt., we learned of Dr. I. A. Loveland of Gilsum, N. H. He had traced his pedigree to the third generation. While at Middletown we met George H. Loveland who had traced his ancestry to Samuel² Loveland. He was in possession of much information which will appear in its place in these volumes. We now come to an important question: Who were the ancestors of Thomas¹ Loveland? We cannot reprint what has been so fully set forth in the first volume. We give a synopsis and our conclusions:

The first record of the name Loveland in this country is that of Robert, who witnessed a deed at Boston in 1645.

The next is of Widow Loveman (Loveland) who pursued in the Court at Hartford a remedial action of trespass in 1649.—Colonial Records, Sept. 16, 1649.

The next is of John Loveman (Loveland), Hartford, who died 1670.—Vol. 1, page 35, Hartford Probate Records.

The next is the second appearance of Robert Loveland at New London, Conn., in 1658. We quote a brief sketch of him from Calkins' History of New London, Vol. 1, page 33:

"He is denominated a mariner and trader from Boston. He became a permanent resident of New London, although he seems to have continued, for a time at least, a seafaring life. He was supercargo of the ship Hope, of which Robert Warner was captain, which came into New London, in 1660, storm beaten and in want of provisions. He died in 1668."

We think we have been able to connect these three and place them in one family. By traditions handed down from generation to generation and reported to us by members of the different branches, we find they agree that three brothers came to this country together and that one of them was drowned. Leonard Hodge Loveland of Brighton, Ohio, goes further and is more explicit. He was 88 years old when he wrote, and was interviewed.

He had seen his great-grandfather, Elisha³. He says the tradition in his branch is that our family with two others, Smith and Kimberly, came from England. Loveland died on the passage. Smith, Kimberly, the Widow Loveland and her three sons came to America. One son was drowned in the Connecticut River. He died unmarried. The other two married. Loveland paid the passage of Smith and Kimberly from England for their services on the passage and for a stated time thereafter. Mr. Loveland was supercargo. After his death they kept the widow's accounts. Loveland was called Loveman by a good many old people. He had heard his uncle, Isaac, say he knew twenty-two Lovelands in the Revolutionary Army, all from Wethersfield and Glastonbury.

John⁵ Loveland, who died in 1890, aged 92 years, was interviewed in his lifetime. Says: "I have heard my father (Joseph⁴) say that our great ancestor came over as supercargo from England, had three sons of whom one was drowned shortly after coming over." Many other reports are of similar import.

If our ancestor, who died on the passage from England, was supercargo, he was certainly succeeded in the same line of seafaring life by his son, Robert, who eventually settled and died at New London.

Either this Robert, or John who died at Hartford in 1670, was the father of our common ancestor, Thomas. But John was not supercargo. From the fact that among the early Loveland names we find the name of the ship of which Robert was supercargo, has led us to decide with some hesitancy in favor of him. But John lived in the same neighborhood with Thomas¹, the Hartford and Glastonbury line alone apparently separating them. The widow also lived, if not with her son John, near by.

But where was the home of our ancestors in the old country? When did they arrive in this?

When we discovered that Smith and Kimberly were in the same company with them, we hoped to be able to answer these questions. Smith was too common a name to trace, so we went for Kimberly. Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, says: "Kimberly, Thomas, Dorchester, 1635 had a wife, Alice, with whom he removed to New Haven in 1639. His estate then small. He had six or eight children, of whom Eleazur of Glastonbury, was born in New Haven, said to be the first white child born there." So far as we have been able to learn, the Kimberly family have not traced their ancestry to the old country. The foregoing facts are, however, confirmatory of the traditions, and fix a date, 1635, prior to which our ancestors were no doubt in this country.

It would have been gratifying to have made, without question, our connection with our English cousins, but we are thankful for what we have been enabled to accomplish. We are glad to learn that by many of our relatives and friends our work is appreciated.

Respectfully,

GEORGE LOVELAND,

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

THE LOVELAND GENEALOGY.

DUBUQUE, IOWA, May 5, 1893.

Prof. J. B. Loveland, Fremont, Ohio:

DEAR COUSIN:—The first volume of the Loveland Genealogy has reached me here and its perusal has stirred me up to a strong desire to renew my investigations which I have necessarily omitted for three years past. I cannot resist the conviction that the habitat of our family in England can be ascertained. But it very likely would cost something, and as a rule our family is usually only comfortably circumstanced as to wealth, and this, by the way, is in my estimation, one of its greatest glories. We have been content with an honest living, instead of pursuing the robber path of speculative swindling. But there are some methods which are open to us. I think I once mentioned to you that one of Dean Prideaux's Vestrymen was a Loveland. As it is forty and more years since I saw the book (Prideaux's Connexions), I don't recall what part of England he lived in. Nor do I know where I could find the book, as it is very old. I presume some old and scholarly minister might have it. If I was in the East, I presume I could find it. Some years since I heard an Englishman say that the Loveland family in England was one of very high standing. I propose writing to him and ascertain the locality from whence he came. Now as to the race from which we descended. The location in Norfolk and the coat of arms most certainly point to a Norman origin. The plains of Normandy, as you know, were the favorite grounds for hunting the wild boar, and the French Sans Crainte is a most fitting motto for the daring hunters of that savage beast. The Sans Crainte denotes either a Norman origin or that the family at least belonged to the gentility and not to the peasant class. But the boar's head and the French motto point very strongly to a Norman origin. But this conclusion is, perhaps, more than offset by the name. I have never seen a French name ending with land. So far as I am aware that is an English termination. I am not sufficiently posted in name terminology to know how this and many other name terminations came into being. But I can see how an understanding of this would aid in settling the race question.

That there is quite an admixture of Scotch blood in the family I am sure, though I do not know exactly where it came in. But it frequently crops out in the tall form, blue or gray blue eyes and the subtle metaphysical intellect so characteristic of the Scotch. Nevertheless, the primitive stock cannot be Scotch, however much it may have been filtered in along the line of numerous intermarriages. There is no doubt but blood will tell; in other words, we shall find the potent factor of heredity cropping out in the character of the members of any family as numerous and widespread as ours. But the root idea or distinguishing feature, while it retains its individuality like the persistence of species, will at the same time be so modified by the environments as to be often largely obscured, and this especially where different races of the same common type are blended.

We Americans are a composite unity. The divided racial streams from the old Aryan oneness are combining here in another oneness far in advance of the primitive one on the plains of Central Asia; and yet, with all our culture, the independent, nomadic trait of the Aryan hordes which poured into Europe in different ages, still dominate us largely to-day. Our family has proved itself Aryan in that respect. But it is only by this composite process of mingling these different strains of common blood together that we can secure the highest type of manhood, or perhaps I should say humanity. We, as a family, have certainly pursued this process of composition. Whether the parent stem was French, Saxon or Briton, we can find now no lineal descendant from any one of them, but instead a composite family still showing the strong features of the original English stock of our ancestors, let us hope, modified and advanced by our more than two centuries of experience in the new world. If I was called on to point out one of the most prominent defects of our family, which I have all my life noticed in the sphere of my own branch, and the volume you sent me shows the same in the others, it is the lack of that form of ambition which pushes men into places they are capable of filling. But I must also say that I consider it as one of the crowning glories of the family. Our history proves that there has been no lack of patriotic devotion to the public weal. Our blood has flowed upon the battlefields of all our national contests, and we have proved our capacity to fill any position, but we have not pushed to the front like many others. Why have we not? Because the Loveland family has an inherent contempt for that two-faced hypocritical course which "bends the frequent hinges of the knees that thrift may follow fawning." If pride were allowable, I would glory that I am one of the Loveland family. Excuse me, dear cousin, I had no idea of writing an eulogy of our family when I began this letter, but my pen ran away with me.

Fraternally thine,

J. S. LOVELAND.

THOMAS LOVELAND, ESQ. (A).

ENGLISH ITEMS.

It is believed that the progenitor of the Lovelands in England came over with the Norman invaders, who marched and fought under the victorious banner of William the Conqueror, in 1066.

The surname Loveland is derived from the Manor of Loveland, Norfolk County, England. Family surnames do not date back much further than the latter part of the tenth century. They first came into use in Normandy and were introduced into England by the Norman adventurers. Many of the followers of William taking theirs from their paternal Chateaux.

The earliest home of the Lovelands in England is believed to have been the city of Norwich, in the county of Norfolk. Lovelands lived in this county at a very early date. The Loveland coat-of-arms (Norfolk) are thus described:

Arms. Sable. Three boars' heads.

Crest: A boar's head couped. Sable.

Motto: Sans Crainte. (Without fear.)

At a very early date they migrated to different parts of the British Isles, and to America. Nothing is known of the family in London further back than 1770, though, doubtless, they were here when he who died on the passage sailed for America. There are many Lovelands in Limpsfield and Guilford, Surrey County. The Church Records of the former place show births as early as 1654. Our efforts to examine the records in other counties where Lovelands are known to reside have met with no response. From an English letter we learn that there is a Sir John Loveland on the Isle of Man.

There was a Sir John Loveland who was Lord Mayor of London four times. He built the church of St. Michael's, Cook's Lane, and there is his funeral monument. But whether he was the ancestor of William Loveland, whose descendants are given in this chapter, or of the Surrey or American Lovelands we are unable to tell. There is a great similarity of names. The London coat-of-arms of Thomas Loveland has the main features of the Norfolk. By intermarriage the Oldershaw coat-of-arms is quartered with it. For further information on this subject see "English Items" in Volume 1. Some genealogists have affirmed a common origin between the Lovebans and Lovelands. The arms have some points of similarity.

COMPENSATION.

The skylark springs to English skies,
And morn is vocal with its song;
The thicket has its nightingale,
 And all along
The lanes are hawthorn hedges sweet,
And daisies lie beneath the feet.

What hath our native land like these
To help a poet in his song?
What singing birds, what fragrant flowers,
 To her belong?
That one can love like these glad things
Which Spring to happy England brings.

O, singer, who would make your lay
All rich with bloom and song of bird,
Hast ever felt the bluebird's joy?—
 Hast thrushes heard?
Or hast thou sought our sylvan bowers
In Spring to gather wildwood flowers?

Mrs. M. P. A. CROZIER.

TRADITIONS.

"Our family with two others, Smith and Kimberly, came from England. Loveland died on the passage. Kimberly, Smith and the Widow Loveland and her three sons came to America. They together bought a tract of land of an Indian chief, the tribe assenting. When the land was surveyed some lay in what is now called Glastonbury, and some in Wethersfield, Connecticut. The Widow Loveland's land lay on each side of the Connecticut River. One of Mrs. Loveland's sons settled in Wethersfield, the other in Glastonbury. The third son was drowned in the Connecticut River when passing from one side to the other. He died unmarried. Sowheag was the name of the great Sachem whose dominion extended over all the Indians of Middletown, Chatham, and over the Pyquag or Wethersfield Indians, whose Sachem's name was Sequin. Tradition further says, that the land bought by the Widow Loveland, Smith and Kimberly, was bought of Sequin, that the deed was not recorded, that Loveland paid Smith and Kimberly's passage from England for their services on the passage and for a stated time thereafter, that Loveland was supercargo, that our ancestors on the Loveland side are of English extraction, but on the mother's side Scotch or Welsh, that Elisha is a family name, that it was the name of the one who died on the passage and the name of the one drowned in the Connecticut River.—L. H. LOVELAND.

The above are the essential parts of the traditions of the origin of the Lovelands in this country as given us by L. H. Loveland in his lifetime. He died at the age of 93. He was a man of remarkable memory which he inherited from his father who was born in Glastonbury. These two men undoubtedly have often heard the above traditions repeated by Lovelands in Connecticut who knew Thomas Loveland, our great ancestor, and who were familiar with his whole history. We think the traditions reliable.

Indeed, the greater part of them are corroborated by history and public records. The first purchase of the Indians by the town was made about 1636. The Indians gave no deed for this purchase, nor for the individual grants. The titles were confirmed by Court in 1665.

We have other traditions bearing on the above. Mr. Paxton, of Loveland, Ohio, whose wife is a descendant of the same branch as L. H. L., says: "The original stock in this country came from Scotland, three brothers coming at the same time." [This undoubtedly refers to the mother's side. —J. B. L.]

I. A. Loveland, of Gilsum, N. H., same branch, says: "The descendants of Israel¹ Loveland, who married his Cousin, Dinah¹ Loveland, have the tradition that the father of Israel was one of the three brothers who emigrated to Connecticut, two of whom were soon after accidentally drowned." [This tradition does not go back so far as L. H. L.'s.]

W. B. Loveland, descendant of Benjamin³, same branch: "It has always been told me that we descend from one of two brothers who came to this country many years ago from England, and shortly after landing they separated and never saw each other afterward." [This would seem to indicate that one followed the sea and points strongly to Robert Loveland, who died in New London in 1668.—J. B. L.]

Timothy V. Loveland, of the second branch, a descendant of Lot³: "There were three brothers came to this country, and one of them died unmarried. My grandfather was one of them. He settled in Glastonbury." [The sequel shows that this does not go back so far as L. H. L.] Another descendant of Lot³: "Elijah and his brother removed from Connecticut to Chatham, Mass."

S. H. Loveland, another descendant of Benjamin³: "In 1872, while visiting in the New England States, I met Russell Loveland who made out that he was second cousin to my father. He was a man 93 years old. He told me the Lovelands originated from three brothers who came from England at an early day. One died a bachelor. The others, David⁴ and Waite⁴, had families." [Russell is a descendant of the first branch. He does not go back far enough.]

T. B. Loveland, a descendant of John²: "My recollection is that my father told me that our great ancestor, Joseph Loveland, came to America about 1664 as supercargo, and I think he said was of Scotch descent." [Not far enough, but points strongly to Robert of New London.]

George Loveland, brother of above: "You see, my brother has the name Joseph instead of Robert. The fact that our branch held that we descended from the supercargo is the material fact. Scotch-Irish descent is my recollection, and it is consistent with the idea that the Lovelands were from Norfolk, England. At one time in English history there was quite an emigration from England to the north of Ireland under a promise of land to settlers. I have a theory in regard to the origin of the Loveland family in England, their Saxon origin and their settlement in England prior to the Norman conquest."

John³ Loveland, uncle of the above: "I recollect hearing my father say that our great ancestor came over supercargo from England and had three sons, one of whom was drowned shortly after coming over. I think he said we were Scotch at that time on the mother's side." [This John Loveland died in 1890, aged 92 years, and the writer, his son, has frequently heard him give the above tradition. He never gave the name of the supercargo or the names of his sons.—J. B. L.]

F. Q. Loveland, Grand Isle, Vermont: "My father says that he has heard his father say that Ziba and Hannibal Loveland, two brothers, came across the great waters from England to Connecticut." [Not far enough.]

The above are the most important of the traditions bearing on the origin of the Loveland family in this country.—J. B. L.

THE FIRST LOVELANDS IN AMERICA.

EXTRACTS FROM SAVAGE'S GENEALOGICAL DICTIONARY.

“LOVELAND, LOVEMAN, OR LOVENAM:

“Robert, Boston, 1645, a witness to a deed; may have removed to Connecticut; was taxed at New London 1666; had four years before a lawsuit with Bigot Eggleston, of Windsor, about hides to be tanned.

“John, Hartford, died 1670; had a wife and probably children, but no more is known; perhaps the family was perpetuated at Glastonbury.

“Widow Loveland, pursued a remedial action for trespass, 1649, Samuel Gardiner for himself, Thomas Edwards and Widow Loveman against Osman, defendant, in an action of trespass. Damages, £4. (Colonial Records, Sept. 16, 1649.)

“Thomas, Wethersfield, 1670; proposed for Freeman that year; had a grant of land 1674; perhaps ten years later was of Hartford.”

This quotation, no doubt, includes all the first Lovelands in this country. The work was very searching and claims to be a complete record of the first settlers in New England for three generations. The first three names we assume to be the Widow Loveland and her two sons, Robert and John. Tradition says that “the husband died on the passage, that the third son was drowned in the Connecticut River.” The fourth name, Thomas, we believe to be the son of Robert or John. The preponderance of testimony favors his being the son of Robert. Robert died in 1668, and John Sept. 2, 1670, both quite old men. We believe Thomas was made a Freeman as soon as the law would allow, and that in 1670 he was twenty-one. He probably married in 1674, when he received the grant of land. It is quite certain that at this date he was the only one in America bearing the name of Loveland. He is the American progenitor of the Loveland family in this country, as he was doubtless born here. The inventory of the estate of John Loveland, who died in 1670, shows that he had dealings with him. They both lived near each other.

Tradition says that two young men, Kimberly and Smith, had their passage paid by our ancestor. In 1635 we find a young couple, Thomas Kimberly, living at Dorchester, where the ship would naturally land. They were not in affluent circumstances. We find them again at New Haven in 1640. Our idea is that Kimberly and Smith, the Widow Loveland and family, left Dorchester for the Connecticut Valley in 1635, or soon after; that Robert found occupation as sailor, Dorchester being just the place to find such employment. Thomas, his only son, no doubt, lived the most of his time with his grandmother, for soon after Robert's death he was quite a land holder. Robert was reputed rich, whilst on the other hand his brother, John, was known to be comparatively poor.

The history of Robert Loveland is too lengthy to repeat in this connection. Those who can afford it should command our first volume. Further mention of John and the Widow Loveland we deem unnecessary also. We now repeat what we know of Thomas Loveland:

THOMAS LOVELAND, WETHERSFIELD, 1670.

We first find him in Wethersfield, now Glastonbury, Connecticut. It is recorded of him that he owned land in the "First Purchase" by the town, previous to 1670. This purchase was made in 1636. As the Indian Grants to the individual settlers were included in the First Purchase, it gives color to the tradition of L. H. Loveland, that the Widow Loveland and her three sons bought lands of the Indians on the Connecticut River. The name of his grandfather, who "died on the passage to this country," is a matter of conjecture. But in accordance with English custom, it was probably that of his oldest son. The earliest home of the Lovelands in England is believed to be the city of Norwich, in the county of Norfolk. Lovelands lived in Norfolk County at a very early date, and at a very early date they migrated to different parts of the British Isles, and to America. Thomas Loveland was made Freeman of Wethersfield in May, 1670, by the Court at Hartford. (See Colonial Records, p. 132.) Before a member of society could exercise the right of suffrage, or hold any public office, he must be made a Freeman by the General Quarterly Court. To become a Freeman he was required to produce evidence that he was a respectable member of some Congregational Church. Previous to 1670, however, this regulation was modified by Royal Order, so that individuals could be made Freemen by obtaining certificates from clergymen acquainted with them, that they were correct in doctrine and conduct. But Thomas Loveland was an ardent supporter of the church and an influential member of the one in the society where he lived. All applicants to become Freemen were required to take the Freeman's Oath. (See N. E. and G. R. for 1840, p. 41.) In 1673 he was assessed to pay "Indian Purchase of 5,000 acres" on the east side of the Connecticut River, one-half penny per pound assessment, amounting to three shillings and four pence. This would make the assessed value of his real estate at this time about 80 pounds, and in 1674 he was granted by the town the last of the four score acre lots (lot 44) included in the "First Survey" of lands in Connecticut. The lands bought by the town included in these two purchases were distributed to the inhabitants of the town from time to time. In Volume 4 of the Land Records we find that the first division of the above lands (5,000 acres) was made April 28, 1701, by a committee from Wethersfield, Thomas Loveland receiving No. 10, containing 120 acres. At other times thereafter he received various other grants of land in Glastonbury. One of special mention was 60 acres "for his good services in erecting the meeting house in 1693." We never made an exhaustive search to ascertain what disposition was made of his lands. From the Glastonbury Records of Deeds we note the following: "Thomas Loveland, Sen., to his son, John Loveland, in consideration of natural affection, five acres including house. Dated 1707; acknowledged, Nov. 8, 1708. Thomas Loveland, Sen., to his grandson, Thomas Loveland, Jun., and his sons, Robert and John Loveland, 100 acres; John Loveland to have one-half, or 50 acres, Thomas 25 acres adjoining John, and Robert the remainder, 25 acres. Dated 1716; acknowledged, Sept. 10, 1716." He must have died within a few years after making this deed. We have been unable to identify him previous to 1670, or to find a record of his marriage, or a record of the settlement of his estate. The Glastonbury Centennial gives the family records of five of his children. Of the others, Thomas is proved to be his son from deed record, and Samuel, because there was no other Loveland in Connecticut at the time of his birth old enough to be his father, and the date of his birth makes him contemporary with the children of Thomas. In the family record we place these names last, though we have reason to believe that Thomas and Robert were the oldest sons. The exact order is uncertain. Children born in Glastonbury:

- i. John², m Keziah Williams, June 16, 1708.
1. ii. Robert, m Ruth Gillam, Aug. 19, 1697.
- iii. Hannah, m William House, Dec. 1, 1709.

He was a resident in Glastonbury and received a grant of the public land in 1698. He d April 1, 1717. Hezekiah Dylls or common land, and east on highway.

The index figures to the right of Christian names indicate generations and relationship, as: George⁶ Loveland (Elijah⁵, Joseph⁴, John³, John², Thomas¹). The names in the parenthesis are father⁵, grandfather⁴, etc., of George⁶, and George⁶ is the sixth generation in descent of Thomas¹ Loveland.

SECOND BRANCH.

ROBERT² LOVELAND (Thomas¹) in common with other residents and land holders of Glastonbury, Conn., received grants of land from the town. His will is recorded there, which indicates that he died about 1762. We find him a resident of that part of Glastonbury, afterward Hebron. He deeds land there to his son, Robert, Jr., Oct. 16, 1761. His name is mentioned in 1747 among the petitioners from Eastbury (which includes Hebron) to set off a part of the parish to form the Ecclesiastical Society of Marlborough. Previous to this the public records show him to be active in church and school work. He married in Glastonbury, Aug. 19, 1697, Ruth Gillam. Farmer. Also owned and run a saw mill. The Glastonbury record gives his children:

- i. John³, b May 23, 1698, d Aug. 15, 1701.
- ii. Ruth, b July 30, 1702, m ——— Andrews.
2. iii. Lot, b May 13, 1703, m.
3. iv. Robert, b Dec. 9, 1705, m Dinah Andrews.
- v. Hannah, b Dec. 27, 1707, unm. Was administratrix of her father's estate, with her brother Lot in 1762. The names of his four living children are mentioned in his will.

General Court, Vol. VII. At a general assembly holden at Hartford, May 13, 1731, parish powers and privileges were granted unto the inhabitants of the Eastern farms of Glastonbury. The said parish shall be bounded as follows: East, partly with Hebron and partly with Bolton bounds; west, with the lands called the mile of commons, including the families with their farms within said common land, viz.: Robert Loveland, Robert Loveland, Jr., Daniel Wright, and others.

Glas. Deed Book. Robert Loveland to his son, Lot Loveland. Consideration: Natural love and affection. Conveys one piece of land with dwelling house thereon, situated in Glastonbury (Eastbury Parish), containing eighty-eight acres.

LOT^a LOVELAND (Robert², Thomas¹) was b in Glastonbury, Conn., May 13, 1703. Name of wife unknown. He had children at school in 1734. (See Eastbury Records.) Why the families of this period were not entered upon the town records is a matter of conjecture. From fragmentary records we are led to believe that the old record books were full and that the town clerks kept loose leaves that were lost. The marriages not appearing on the church records would indicate that up to a certain period they were entered upon the town records. This was a time when great carelessness existed in regard to records. The order of his children's births is uncertain. Lot Loveland lived in Eastbury Parish, which is now included in East Glastonbury. His descendants live there now (1894). The old farm is situated three or four miles from the Eastbury Church. He was reputed the strongest man living in his vicinity. It is related of him that he stood in a half-bushel measure and shouldered five bushels of salt. Two more bushels were put on top of that and he carried the seven bushels up stairs, bursting a pair of new calf skin shoes in the act. He with a few others were once surrounded in a swamp by Indians. Being unarmed he led the way to a sortie, surprised the redskins and with bare hands smashed their way and made their escape. It is said Lot tumbled them beautifully and swiftly. He received a grant of land from the town of Glastonbury in 1757. Conveyed land to his son, Jonathan, in 1771. Was living in 1777. The date of Jonathan's birth was taken from an old letter written by himself to his son, Merriness Willit⁵, in the Territory of Illinois. Information of Lot's³ family was obtained from his great grandson, Sylvester⁶ (Francis⁵, Elizur⁴). Children born in Glastonbury:

4. i. Lot⁴, m Mabel ———.
5. ii. Joel, m.
6. iii. Elijah, m Molly Buck; 2d, Hannah Buck.
7. iv. Elizur, m Ruth Sparks, dau. of Thomas Sparks.
8. v. Jonathan, b June 6, 1741, m Bethiah Winslow.
- vi. Deborah, m Daniel Wright.
- vii. Hannah.

LOT⁴ LOVELAND, JR., (Lot³, Robert², Thomas¹) was b in Glastonbury, Conn. But little is known of him or his family. The Lot Loveland named in the Conn. Roster, on page 385, as being a private in Capt. Hale's company at Boston, Jan'y-March, 1776, we think to be him. He died in 1777. Letters of administration were granted to his widow, Mable Loveland, June 3, 1777. Mable Loveland married James Wright, Aug. 28, 1781. Mable Loveland married Daniel Wright, March 13, 1786. This couple were probably son of James Wright and daughter of Lot, Jr., and Widow Loveland. Mabel was probably her only child. Marietta⁶ Ryder (Dinah⁵, Elijah⁴, Lot³) writes: "I have heard my mother tell of her Aunt Mabel Wright visiting her."

Hartford Probate Records, No. 22. "June 3, 1777, letters of administration granted on the estate of Lot Loveland, Jun., of Glastonbury, to Mabel, widow of said deceased. Bond £400. Aaron Hubbard bondman." The jun. indicates his father was living.

JOEL⁴ LOVELAND (Lot³, Robert², Thomas¹). From the Eastbury (Glastonbury) Church Records we have: "Heard of the death of Joel Loveland who died at Quebec, Aug. 7, 1776, a prisoner." This fixes his home in East Glastonbury, where he probably m. From the "Connecticut Men in the Revolutionary War," pages 52, 92, we have: "Joel Loveland, taken prisoner at Quebec, Dec. 31, 1775, and died Feb'y 28, 1776." From these records it appears he was detached from the 10th company, 2nd regiment, Gen. Spencer's Connecticut troops, to join Arnold's ill-fated expedition to Quebec. These two Joels were probably father and son. There was a Lot Loveland marched with this expedition who is reported among the "guns lost." He could not have been Lot Loveland who was in Capt. Hale's company at Boston, Jan'y-March, 1776. He was probably a son of Joel. The record does not show his death, but from letters of correspondents we have: "Joel Loveland and his two sons died prisoners at Quebec during the Revolutionary War." We fix this family in East-bury Parish (Glastonbury). The following are believed to be the names of his sons:

- i. Joel³, d at Quebec, Feb'y 28, 1776.
- ii. Lot, d at Quebec, 1776.
9. iii. James, m Molly Howes.
10. iv. Timothy, b Feb'y 22, 1765, m Thankful Howes, m 2d Dorcas Doane, m 3d Sarah Snow.
11. v. Daniel, m Ruth Keeny.

Why we conclude Joel⁴ Loveland to be the ancestor of the Chatham, Mass., Lovelands:

1. We have the assurance that Timothy V.⁶ Loveland's (Timothy⁵) grandfather, whoever he was, died at Quebec, was a native of Glastonbury and a brother of Elijah⁴ Loveland (Lot³, Robert², Thomas¹).

2. We find in the Eastbury, Conn., Church Record: "1776. Aug. 7. Heard that Joel Loveland died at Quebec a prisoner." From the Connecticut Roster we have: "Joel Loveland taken prisoner at Quebec, Dec. 31, 1775, and died Feb'y 28, 1776." We find only one other Loveland in that expedition: "Among the names of the 'guns lost' we find the name of Lot Loveland." We have no assurance that this Lot perished in this expedition, but the preponderance of evidence points that way and makes him a grandson of Lot³.

3. We have made, we believe, an almost exhaustive search for Lovelands in Glastonbury, Conn., and have probably found some trace of every family that ever lived there, and by a close examination of the Church Records we have found the parish in which these families lived. The organization and building of the Eastbury Church gives us the residence of Robert² Loveland, as well as his son Robert³ and his nephew Thomas³, until about 1742, when the latter two removed their families to Hebron, or that part of Glastonbury which helped in 1803 to form Marlborough. Lot³ Loveland lived in a part of Eastbury Parish now included in East Glastonbury. His descendants live there now on the old farm of Lot³. There were no other Loveland families living at an early day within the bounds of Eastbury Parish, except Elisha³ Loveland and his descendants, all of whom we have traced. The Church Records and cemetery grounds fix the descendants of Elisha³ and Lot³ in that part of Glastonbury known as East Glastonbury, which was formerly included in Eastbury. It is hardly probable that any other families than these two lived in that part of Glastonbury after 1742. If not, then was not Joel⁴, who died at Quebec, a son of Lot³? But Joel⁴ had two sons who died in the army at Quebec in 1776, or thereabout. This is what Timothy V. Loveland, of Chatham, alleges: "Lot³ was born in 1703 and had children of school age in 1734. Joel⁴ may have been born as early as 1729. If he married at twenty-five, sons might have been born in 1754-56, which would make them young men when the Rev. War broke out." The theory is possible and the conclusion probable.

4. Lastly: This family says: "Joseph⁵ Loveland (Elijah⁴, Lot³) is a cousin of Timothy⁵ (Joel⁴, Lot³)." Other extracts of letters all point to the conclusion that the Chatham Lovelands are descendants of Lot³ Loveland through his son Joel⁴ who died of smallpox (a prisoner) at Quebec.

JAMES⁵ LOVELAND (Joel⁴, Lot³) was b in Glastonbury (Eastbury Parish), Conn. He removed to Chatham, Mass., about 1776-1780, m there Dec. 12, 1781, Molly Howes, sister of his brother Timothy's wife. SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.

MR. ERASTUS W. LOVELAND, A PROMINENT BANGOR LUMBERMAN, IS DROWNED AT PASSADUMKEAG TO-DAY.—THE BODY RECOVERED.

Just before noon to-day, Mr. William T. Pearson, of Bangor, received a telegram from Passadumkeag, stating in few words "that Mr. Erastus W. Loveland, the lumberman, had been drowned at Passadumkeag Rips, and that the body had not been recovered." At 1 o'clock, however, a second dispatch was received to the effect that the body had been recovered and would be sent to Bangor by the fast freight which left Passadumkeag at 1 o'clock, arriving here at 4:20. It seems there had been a jam at this place on the river and Mr. Loveland who directed the work of his own crew, was engaged on the logs, when unexpectedly there was a break and he fell into the water beneath them. Mr. William T. Pearson and Mr. P. Loveland, brother of the deceased, took the noon train for up the river. They will return in charge of the remains. The late Mr. Loveland was about 58 years of age. He had a good business education and early in life he went into the lumber business. He has extensively operated on the East and West branches of the Penobscot, and was one of the most prominent of the men identified with the lumber interest. Of late years he has been supplied by Mr. W. T. Pearson. He will be greatly missed by the many men who have been in his employ, as well as by those who are dearest to him. The announcement of the death became generally known among the citizens during the day, and much sorrow and sympathy was expressed. "Mr. Loveland," said a well known lumberman, "was one of the men that moved the world." No citizen could be more missed. He was busy and enterprising and a generous-hearted man. He leaves a wife and daughter. He was insured against accident in the Fidelity Causality Company, of which Blake, Barrows and Brown are the General Agents, for $5,000. He had a life policy in the Aetna Company.—Commercial (Bangor, Maine, Paper, June 24, 1886).

To Miss Matilda B. Loveland belongs the credit for the foregoing information of her father's, grandfather's and great-grandfather's families.

Widow Hopkins, by her first marriage had: Lizzie, Abigail, Mercy and Ruth Hopkins. Widow Simmons had Reliance and Benjamin Simmons. Timothy V. writes: "I had an uncle Daniel who went to Vermont and had a family." Dr. T. O. Loveland writes: "The story regarding Van Zandt Stoepel refers to my father, Timothy Van Zandt⁶. His father wished to give him his own name, and to avoid the use of Jr., gave my father for a middle name the name of an uncle (i. e. uncle to Timothy⁵), dropping from it for the sake of brevity the last name, Stoepel. It would thus appear that Joel¹ married a Van Zandt Stoepel." Ziba Nickerson, of Chatham: "The records show that the First Universalist Society in Chatham was organized on or about the first of August, 1822. Timothy⁵ Loveland was one of the original members. At a regular meeting of the Society, Aug. 28, 1822, Salathiel Nickerson was chosen an agent to procure materials for the building of a Universalist Meeting House. Salathiel Nickerson, Timothy Loveland and Joseph Young were appointed agents to conduct the building of said house. Mr. Loveland purchased two pews when the house was completed, which was done and dedicated early in 1824. He was a member of the standing committee of the Society in 1824. He also was a member of the church which was reorganized in 1835." Again, Dr. T. O. L.: "He was always interested and active in church work, giving of his time and means to a cause in which he fully believed. In the new church his name is preserved in one of the windows." The tradition in this family is that they are of Dutch origin.

BRIGHTON, ILL., Aug. 23, 1882.

Mr. J. B. Loveland, Fremont, O.:

DEAR SIR:—You wish to know the history of our branch of the family prior to 1800. I have no dates or written history of it prior to that time. All the knowledge I have of my great ancestor I learned from my father long years ago. He often told me his grandfather¹ Loveland came from Germany. I have forgotten his name. He had five sons. His father (Leonard's) was one of the youngest. His name was Timothy². I do not remember the name of but one other, and that was Elijah. (Evidently wrong. She has Elijah⁶, the son of Timothy's brother.) Two of the sons were in the army in the Revolutionary War, and one was killed. Elijah settled in the State of Maine. He had a large family of children. I don't remember how many or any of their names. Timothy³ settled in Chatham, Mass. He married Thankful Howes, of Chatham. She was of the old Puritan stock. They had three sons and three daughters. * * * My father moved to Brighton, Ill., 45 years ago. He died at the age of 76. He was of a roving disposition, a sailor in his early days. He was fond of adventure and liked the life of a pioneer. His sons are very much like him, and I think from what I know of the Lovelands, most of them are of the same disposition. My father, with a man by the name of Nickerson, moved to Ohio with their families 64 years ago. They entered land in the timber five miles from any settlement. I was but 4 years old then, but remember it well, and I am almost sure my father made the first clearing and built the first house (log) on the very spot where the town of Loveland, in Ohio, now stands. He lived there four years and then returned to Chatham.

Yours respectfully,

THANKFUL H. ALBRO.

REV. LEONARD LOVELAND.

Another of our pilgrim fathers has gone home. Rev. Leonard Loveland fell asleep in Jesus, near Brighton, Ill., April 26, aged 76 years. He was a bright light in the church of Christ for many years, and has now gone to reap the reward of the chosen people of God. He was born in Chatham, Mass., May 23d, 1792. At the age of 10 he entered the sea service and when the war of 1812 sounded its alarm through our beloved country he entered the service, was taken prisoner and confined in Dartmore Prison, England, where he remained twenty months, suffering the privations and cruelties that were inflicted on our prisoners at that time. Nine months after the close of the war he returned to his dear native land, so dear, he afterward said, that on his arrival he could have kissed the very ground for joy. He continued in the sea service until 1817, enduring the suffering incident to such a life. In 1819 he moved to Ohio and settled near Janesville, where in September of the same year he experienced religion and joined the M. E. Church, Rev. Charles Elliott being pastor of the church at that time. When he joined he told them he wished to belong to a people who were humble, even though they were persecuted for righteousness sake, and he believed he had found such a people in the Methodists. In 1837 he removed to Illinois and settled near Brighton where he has remained most of his time up to the day of his death. He received Deacon's orders in 1851 and has been a local preacher nearly 31 years. He made all the arrangements for his funeral, requesting that he might be buried without parade or show. During the last three weeks of his sickness he suffered very much, but his mind was calm and peaceful as a summer's evening. "At last he slept the peaceful sleep from which none ever wake to weep." In his last will and testament he bequeathed for religious purposes his New Hall in Brighton, capable of seating several hundred persons. May we imitate his virtues and meet him in heaven.—JANE A. LOVELAND.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

By REV. J. EARP.

The friends whose wedding anniversary we celebrate to-day, first met in the town of Warwick, R. I., fifty-three years ago. Our early surroundings it is thought—the scenes of our childhood and early manhood—influence us all along the journey of life. Our dear brother, Irus Albro, under whose friendly arch we are assembled, whose hospitalities we this day enjoy and for whose continued happiness we all and each extend our most sincere and hearty good wishes, is of Welsh and English parentage. His father's name was Irus Albro and his mother's maiden name was Edith Lewis. Our dear sister, Thankful H. Albro, is the daughter of Rev. Leonard Loveland, deceased; her mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Eldridge. Sister Albro is the oldest of eleven children, four sons and seven daughters. Five of these children are now living. Brother Loveland was of German and English descent, and Elizabeth Eldridge was of Welsh descent. Sister Albro was born in Chatham, Mass., May 18, 1813. Her father had something of the spirit of adventure, and realizing somewhat of the grandeur of this great continent, was not content to be cir-circumscribed by the lines of the old Bay State, and prophesying that destiny must eventually move the "Star of Empire Westward," in 1818 he moved with his family, Thankful being at that period four years of age, to what was then thought to be the dense forests of the west, and settled in Ohio, near what is now the town of Loveland. Their journey was not just what a move from Boston to Cincinnati would be in these days. From Boston they went in a sailing vessel to Baltimore, and the rest of the route with horses and wagons. The four years spent there was emphatically a frontier experience. The day was spent in toil to subdue the forest and soil for their service, and as the night came on they would retire to their beds and be lulled to sleep by such songs as wolves and panthers sang. Their next move was a return to Chatham, their former home, where they spent five years and then moved to Rhode Island. But for that fortunate move it is questionable whether we should be spending this pleasant hour together to-day. Yet while we all rejoice in the providence that directed the course of Leonard Loveland to the spot on which was established the first government of pure democracy on the American continent, still let no one expect to enjoy the glow of grateful warmth that to-day thrills the bosom of our worthy host. Brother and Sister Albro were married on the 22d day of February, 1835. Heaven blessed this union with three children. But how seldom it is that the cup of joy to mortals given is an unmixed one. So in these pledges of love. The oldest, a boy of thirteen months, sickened and died and was buried in the city of the dead near their eastern home; another, the youngest, a beautiful little girl of eight months, like the lovely flower faded and is buried in the Brighton cemetery. One is left to be the comfort and stay to these parents in the declining years of life. In May, 1838, Brother Albro with his family came west, Mrs. Albro's father having preceded them one year, and settled north-east of this place and made a farm where they lived several years, then bought the land he now owns. In 1853 he built the frame house on this lot, and in 1859-60 the brick building in which we are convened was built. Industry, economy and perseverance, and the blessing of heaven has secured for them all of earthly substance that is needed for the present life, and Divine Grace is fitting them for an inheritance in the heavenly country when their work on earth is done. Brother and Sister Albro have been intimately connected with the Church during their residence in the west, and I ought to say also, with such enterprise and effort made for the good of society. When the friends of good order organized to suppress intemperance, among the names on the list I find Brother and Sister Albro's. Not only have the names of our brother and sister been recorded on the Church Register, but Brother Albro has faithfully filled several of the offices of the Church. If I had to decide which of the positions he has filled the most ably and efficiently, I should say he did excellent service as the chorister. The minister only had to select hymns adapted to his subject when the able and efficient chorister with his faithful and competent corps of singers always furnished most excellent music. - Indeed, is there not reason for its being said that better church music could scarcely be desired than that enjoyed by the church when Brother Albro was the leader.

The writer of this sketch has been intimately acquainted with these friends for a quarter of a century and is pleased to bear testimony to their faithfulness and devotion to the cause of the Master by their liberal support in all the financial interests of the Church and not the least in their deep and abiding sympathy with the cause of Christ, as well as with the pastor in all his labor and care for the Church. I am glad our friends are with us to-day, or perhaps, it would be as proper to say that we are here with them in this pleasant and interesting occasion. I am glad they have passed safely life's mile stone, marked their three score and eleven years. If the Master has work on earth for them to do, I hope that heaven may continue to be gracious, that even an increase may be imparted to them of all precious graces, and that the Church and community may long be blessed with their presence, their example and their counsel.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 7th day of February, in the year of 1817, John Montgomery was born on Rattan Prairie, in the county of Madison, State of Illinois. At the time of his birth Illinois was yet a territory with its seat of government at the little French town of Kaskaskia. Amid the primitive surroundings of the lonely cabin in a sparsely settled space in the now great State of Illinois he grew to manhood with few of the privileges and advantages accorded to the youth of the villages, cities and older settled portions of our great country. The facilities for an education were limited, and public free schools at that time were unknown. The schools of that day were of a rough and rude character and only the commonest opportunities of obtaining an education were at his command. Yet amid these surroundings he managed to obtain an education sufficient to read and write and to transact the usual business in the routine life of the farmer.

The name of Montgomery is one which has been honorably connected with the history of this country. In looking over the history of the family we find it narrated that two brothers by that name came to this country during the Revolution as British soldiers, but their sympathies were with the revolutionists and they resolved to make their cause their own and this country their future home. At the first opportunity they left the British camp and enlisted in the American army and thence forward fought bravely against British tyranny and oppression. One of these was Thomas Montgomery, the grandfather of the deceased. He was in the Continental Army until the close of the war, and was present at Yorktown and saw the surrender of Lord Cornwallis with his army, the last great act in the seven years' struggle of the colonies for their independence.

Family history further relates that that Thomas Montgomery was a cousin to General Montgomery who commanded the hazardous expedition against Quebec and gained a reputation for gallantry and bravery unexcelled by that of any other officer in service at the time of his unfortunate death.

Thomas Montgomery settled in Virginia and afterwards emigrated to the State of Kentucky. Mr. Montgomery's father, Wm. Montgomery, was born in Virginia, and at the time the family went to Kentucky was a boy ten or fifteen years old. William Montgomery was raised in Nelson County, Ky., and on reaching manhood determined to move to a still newer country further west. He accordingly came to Madison County, Ill. The memory of his children cannot designate the exact time of his locating there, but he was living in Madison County during the War of 1812, and was a soldier in one of the companies of rangers organized for protection against the Indians who then roamed undisturbed over the whole country to the north of Madison County. He married Sarah Rattan, whose father was also an early settler of Madison County and from whom Rattan Prairie took its name.

John Montgomery was the second child of a family of twelve children, of whom six are now living, viz.: Nelson Montgomery, the eldest child, now living at the old home place six miles from Edwardsville; Hampton, the youngest son, living near Bethalto; and four daughters: Mrs. Joby, of Alton; Mrs. Loveland, of Colorado; Mrs. Belk, of Madison County, and Mrs. Barnsbach of the same county.

Mr. Montgomery lived with his father until the year 1839, and then came to Macoupin County and settled on the land which his father had entered the previous year and on which the old homestead now stands, the whole tract now comprising about 600 acres. He immediately commenced improving his place and cultivating the land. He in time erected suitable buildings and surrounded them by shade, fruit, walnut and other kinds of trees, being now designated as "Walnut Grove."

He was first married to Mrs. Evans, a widow lady whose maiden name was Loveland, daughter of Leonard Loveland who entered land at an early date near the Montgomery farm. From the union there were four children: Thos. J. Montgomery, who now resides at Fort Collins, Col.; Miranda A., the wife of A. D. Woods, of Woodburn; John P., who now occupies the old homestead at Miles Station; and May Alice, youngest daughter, who married Dr. Frank Stubblefield, now in business at El Paso, Ill. His first wife died January 16, 1865. He married his second wife, now surviving widow, September 11, 1866, Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, formerly Miss Elizabeth Johnson.

Mr. Montgomery having been for several years crippled and being unable to perform physical labor as formerly on his farm he rented it in the year 1880, his son John occupying the homestead and home place. He purchased his present home in Brighton and removed there where he resided until his death, which occurred on the morning of December 29, 1893, at ten minutes to eight o'clock. He was one of the substantial farmers of Brighton Township and during the 54 years of his residence here has witnessed the process of converting rich, uncultivated prairies into productive farms.

From the few scattered settlements with their log cabins located in the borders of the timber lands, favorite location of the early settlers, he witnessed the gradual development of the country. He has beheld these primitive habitations disappear and in their place saw the modern farm house with all the conveniences and comforts take their place. In all this progress he has been an active factor in producing these results. He was a man of iron constitution and well calculated to stand the privations and hardships incident to those early days.

While living on his old place at Miles Station he united with the M. E. Church at that place and contributed the land upon which the church building now stands and remained a faithful and consistent member of that church until his death. In the year 1858 he became a member of the great Masonic Fraternity of the world by joining Hibbard Lodge of F. & A. Masons, located in the village of Brighton. He continued his membership from that time until the Grand Master above called him hence. The brothers of his lodge assembled to perform the last sad rites accorded to all true and faithful Masons on New Year's morning, the services being held in the Miles Station Church with a large number of relatives and old friends in attendance.—The Brighton, Ill., News.

WILLIAM A. H. LOVELAND.

The subject of our sketch was born at Chatham, Mass., May 30, 1826. He now resides in Denver, Colorado. He moved to Lippett, Rhode Island, in 1827, and to Lonsdale, same State, in 1833. First employment he ever had was here in the Lonsdale cotton factory in 1835. Moved to Alton, Illinois, May, 1837, and the same year to Brighton, Illinois, which is near by. Here he helped his father on the farm. Their home was a log cabin, 16 by 24, with a gable roof, and in this house the family of twelve grown people and children lived. In 1837 and 1838 his grandmother and mother died. He continued on the farm until 1845, when he was sent to McKindree College at Lebanon, Illinois, but the school closed after being there only one term. He was next sent to Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, Illinois, in 1846. At the close of the first term he was taken sick with the pleurisy. Dr. Lathy, his physician, advised him to go south as soon as he was well enough. But as the young man had been working mornings and evenings and on all holidays to pay his school expenses, he did not have the money necessary to follow the doctor's advice. He noticed an advertisement in the St. Louis Rep. for teamsters at $25 per month to go to the Mexican War for six months' time. He concluded to volunteer, come back at the end of six months with $150 and finish his education.

He made known his intentions to his room-mate, John Patterson, who was at once anxious to join him. But it was necessary to have money, so young Loveland wrote to his father at Brighton, who answered that he would be in Alton in a few weeks with a load of wheat and would leave him some money. But this was too long to wait. Patterson wrote his uncle with much better success, receiving nine dollars. This then was the capital of these two young men, who, knowing that their parents and relatives would oppose their plans, made all their arrangements as secretly as possible.

On the 2d of March, 1847, they packed a small cowhide trunk with their small amount of wearing apparel and sent it to St. Louis by the packet Luella. The next morning young Loveland with his room-mate ate breakfast with his sister, Mrs. Thankful H. Albro, who reprimanded him severely for having been so rash as to risk his health by walking two blocks so soon after his sickness, this being the first time he had been out. With beating hearts they left the house, and bidding a silent adieu to some of their friends and schoolmates they hurried to Lower Alton just in time to catch the boat for St. Louis. In two days they had spent all their money but seventy-five cents, and on the 6th of March, 1847, they joined the volunteers for six months as mule drivers, though not without some difficulty in satisfying the enlisting officer that they were of age and could drive mule teams. About a week after their enlistment Captain Reed gave young Loveland an opportunity to raise a company of sixty teamsters and laborers to go to the war, which he accomplished in a few days very much to the satisfaction of his superior officer, who then secured for him an offer of $50 per month to take charge of men and wagons to go to Santa Fe, New Mexico. This offer he refused, as he had enlisted to go to Old Mexico and was desirous of going there.

The next day his captain gave him charge of some 200 men and 100 horses, put him on a boat and started him for New Orleans. On the way down Patterson was taken sick with the measles and on his arrival was put in the hospital. He promised that when he got well he would return to Alton and let Mr. Loveland know where he had gone. On leaving New Orleans young Loveland was given charge of 150 men and 100 horses and mules, but the ship had to return to New Orleans on account of an accident to the rudder. Loveland found his chum on his return just discharged from the hospital. Patterson then changed his mind and wanted to go with his room-mate. A few days later they got off and were sent to Vera Cruz, Mexico, where they reported to Gen. Winfield Scott, and Loveland drew his first month's pay, $50 in gold. Here he was assigned to Gen. Twigs' Division as wagon master and retained this connection with the division and his position up to the surrender of the City of Mexico.

At Pueblo a short stop was made to rest the command, and while there young Patterson died in the hospital. This sad event made young Loveland more thoughtful of the union business he was engaged in than he had been in the past. It is unnecessary to relate events of the journey to and the capture of the City of Mexico by a handful of Americans, which has gone down in history as the most daring and successful military achievement of modern times. Our young man did his share of the work well and won the good opinion of his commander. Notwithstanding his position as wagon master he saw plenty of fighting defending the commissary stores, and on more than one occasion he was ordered to lead his teamsters into action. The Americans were so greatly outnumbered in every engagement that their commander was obliged to put every man into battle that had strength to carry a gun, without regard to his position as teamster, nurse, etc. So young Loveland and his teamsters were engaged in just about as much fighting as the regular troops. At the storming of Chapultepec he was wounded by a shell which kept him on his bed in the City of Mexico and on crutches a long time. When he recovered he obtained permission to return home, and in company with three or four others made the trip from the City of Mexico to Vera Cruz without any of them being seriously wounded, though at this time every Mexican on the route constituted himself a bushwhacker to shoot down Americans without mercy. Their adventures on this trip would fill a book, and it was only through good luck that they escaped with their lives.

When he arrived at his home in Brighton, July, 1848, it was his intention to finish his course at Shurtleff College, but he was too anxious to engage in active business and therefore gave up the idea of going to college any longer. But very soon the California gold excitement broke out, and on the 10th day of May, 1849, in company with two companions started for California with a wagon drawn by four yoke of oxen and one yoke of cows. Arrived at Grass Valley in September, and built the first house in the valley which was a log cabin. During the winter of '49 and the spring of '50, also the summer, he engaged in mining, but did not meet with much success. In the fall of that year he was taken seriously sick and in the spring of '51, though not yet quite well, began mining again, but soon broke down. As soon as he was sufficiently well he left for San Francisco. A few days after his arrival he took passage on a Spanish schooner for Rico, Central America, where he arrived after a voyage of some forty days. He proceeded at once to the shores of Lake Nicaragua where he gained strength very fast. While here he spent his time examining the various rivers leading out of the lake with the intention of taking a contract under Commodore Vanderbilt, of N. Y. City, to build a part of the then proposed government canal, but that scheme soon fell through and he continued his journey home, where he arrived in July, 1851, and at once engaged in the merchantile business.

Here he married, and here it was his first wife died. He married a second time at Alton, dates of these marriages are found in their place in this volume. In May, 1859, he sold his business and started for the Pike's Peak gold diggings in Colorado with a train of mules and ox teams loaded with goods. He arrived in Denver in June, and in a few days pushed on to Golden, a few miles farther west. Here he built the first house and opened the first store. He at once engaged in active business operations outside of his mercantile business. He built the wagon road up Clear Creek Canon in '63 and '64, which at that time was looked upon as a great undertaking. He was also engaged in opening up the first coal mines of the State, and erected the first fire brick and pottery works. He took an active part in politics and was elected to the Legislature several times. In '65 and '66 he obtained from the Territorial Legislature a charter for building the Colorado Central Railroad up Clear Creek Canon to the mine at Central City. Prominent engineers at once pronounced the scheme impracticable and impossible of completion, owing to the ruggedness of the canon, its tortuous windings and steep grades. Senator H. M. Teller of the State was his active colleague. These two men worked together hand in hand for years in the daring undertaking, never losing hope or courage, notwithstanding the many difficulties to overcome and the many predictions of failure on the part of friends. At last it was accomplished, and its success opened a new field of engineering possibilities in the Rocky Mountains. This road is known as the Colorado Central, and it was the first narrow gauge road built in the Rocky Mountains, preceding the famous Denver and Rio Grande and other systems.

In 1876 he was elected President and Manager of the Colorado Central Railroad, and shortly after was made a director in the Union Pacific Railroad Company. He resigned these positions in 1880 or '81 in order to look after his newspaper business in Denver, he having bought, in 1878, the Daily Rocky Mountain News, sometimes known as the Denver News, and was also engaged in building a belt road around the city, which was known as the Denver Circle Railroad. During his connection with the News it prospered greatly, and when he sold out in 1886 it was considered the leading paper of the far west, which position it still retains. A little later he sold his interest in the Circle Road, since which time he has been engaged in real estate in this city and farming transactions in San Luis Park where he holds eight or ten thousand acres.

For the past few years he has been trying to settle up his business so that he could retire in peace and quiet, but like the war horse of old, when he scents the fray, it is hard for him to keep out. He has lately been urged to accept the presidency of a construction company to build a road from the Missouri River to Salt Lake City. If he can be assured of proper financial backing he will probably accept the position offered. But few men have engaged in as many active and advantageous operations and worked as hard as Mr. Loveland, and yet he is to day, in his 63d year, in the best of health, and owing to the rigid discipline he has subjected himself to during life is better able to endure the hard labors of business than the large majority of men who are in the prime of their lives.—By his son Frank.

In a Denver paper of Feb'y, 1890, is published the prospectus of the Denver and Salt Lake Short Line. We find Mr. Loveland and his son Frank's names among the incorporators and board of directors. Mr. Loveland is President of the road. Among the advantages named for this road are: Shortest and most direct, through Loveland Pass, White River Valley to its junction with Green River, thence to Du Chesne River and to Provo City—to this point, about 425 miles, this road penetrates the best coal fields of the world, and iron and other mineral wealth in profusion. The terminus of the road at Denver will have a tendency to make it a railroad center for the entire west.—J. B. L.

March 24, 1894, F. W. Loveland writes: "At present the Salt Lake Railroad is necessarily very quiet, but will be taken up as soon as the market will take its bonds. At present father is Treasurer and General Manager of the Denver, Lakewood and Golden Railroad Co., which runs from Denver to Golden and to the various coal and clay mines and stone and lime quarries in that vicinity. It will eventually be extended west to the top of Lookout Mountain and the place turned into a huge summer resort. The scenery from the top of this mountain is grand beyond description. You can look down into the famous Clear Creek Canon and see the railroad trains 3,000 feet below you. To the east are the great plains and Denver fifteen miles away. To the west, north and south is a wilderness of great canons and high mountains, some of them covered with snow all summer. The terminus of the road is in the heart of the retail district of the city, and the company expects to land its passengers on the top of Lookout Mountain in forty minutes. It will probably have to be double tracked in order to carry the passengers. They are now within four miles of the top of the mountain, but as they have to make an elevation of some 2,500 feet you can see how difficult it is. They will have to have an inclined plane road with a cable which draws up one train and lets down another."

F. W. Loveland. Educated in the literary department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and of the law department of University of Denver. For several years was secretary and treasurer of the Rocky Mountain Printing Co., publishers of the Denver Daily News, the largest daily in the west. Later was secretary and treasurer of the Denver Circle Railroad Co., and the Denver Circle Real Estate Co., now owned by Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. For nearly two years was receiver and trustee of the Grand River Ditch Co., at Grand Junction, Colo. Is now, and has been for several years, secretary of the Handy Ditch Co., which owns a large irrigating canal at Berthoud, Colo. Is also secretary and treasurer of the Louisville Coal Mining Co., whose mines are located at Louisville and are worked on the lease and royalty system. The various coal companies operating on this company's property produce from it one-third of all the lignite coal of the State. At present (1894) engaged in the practice of his profession (law), and in looking after his interests in coal mining, farming, irrigating canals, etc. F. W. L.

In 1853 we find him at Brighton, where he has since stood at the front among his professional brethren of Macoupin County. His skill and ability are recognized by his fellow practitioners there and the liberal patronage which he has won from the public is well merited. He is still a student of the profession keeping abreast with every discovery connected with the science of medicine, and his forty years' experience has placed him high in the ranks of his profession. During the late war he served for some months as surgeon in Memphis, Tenn. He is a member of the Baptist Church, Republican in politics, and a Knight Templar Mason, Belvidere Commandery, No. 2, K. The death of Isaac H. Loveland, of Chatham, removes one of that town's most eminent and worthy citizens. He has been ill with an incurable disease for several years and has borne his sickness with great fortitude and resignation. He has known all along that it was a battle with death and that he would ultimately be conquered, but he has preserved his life for a long time by a systematic and careful attention to his wants. He was born in Chatham in 1817, and was the son of Timothy Loveland. In early life he learned the trade of cooper at Bath, Maine, and after working at it at home went to New York, and afterwards to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he pursued his trade. He then returned and worked several years at the north part of the town, Old Harbor, so called. In 1848 he went to Monomony Point in company with Anthony Thacher and his brother, Timothy Loveland, and engaged in the fishing business. In this he prospered and acquired a competence. He remained there until 1866. This closed his active labors with the exception of a few years in which he went to the Point to continue the work of fishing. He was subsequently, at the death of the late Josiah Hurdy, made director of the Cape Cod National Bank, of Harwich. On the retirement of Capt. Prince Crowell from the presidency of the bank, Mr. Loveland was made president, which position he continued to fill till by reason of failing health he was obliged to resign. He was regarded by all as a shrewd business man and a good bank officer. His death is greatly lamented by all who knew him.

Freeman Loveland during his minority received the benefits of the common schools of his day. He started out in life by learning wagon making, which business he followed four years. The year after his marriage, in partnership with his brother-in-law, John McNeil, he went into the grocery business. Two years later he assumed the whole business, adding to his stock dry goods, hardware, building material, drugs—the village being the centre of a large farming community necessitated this variety. This business was highly prosperous. He sold out in 1864, and the two following years was revenue assessor and census enumerator. In 1866 he bought a half interest in a foundry and machine shop in Richmondville. He disposed of his interest in this business at the end of one year, investing in a large double store in the same town. One store was stocked with groceries, the other with dry goods, whilst the basement was a general feed store. Outside of his store he dealt largely in land and cattle and prospected for coal. He ceased active business in 1884, but in the words of his son-in-law: "He began retiring in '84, has been retiring ever since, but has not yet (1894) retired." This is characteristic of his active, untiring and earnest life. As a rule you will now find him around his beautiful home or engrossed with a few choice acres of land just outside the village. He has the confidence and the esteem of the community, is one of the most active and influential members of the Baptist Church, and Republican in politics. His wife, of Scotch descent, is a woman of more than ordinary ability and intelligence, and has by her frugal and careful management largely aided in securing their competence and building up the pleasant home in which they are now enjoying the ripe years of their lives.

Their son, Floyd N., is a young man of studious disposition. By assiduous home study, aided by the village schools of his native town and the adjoining town of Cobleskill, he was enabled, by one year's attendance, to graduate with the class of 1888 from the Ithaca, N. Y., High School. The year following, whilst teaching, he prepared to compete for a State scholarship in Cornell University. He was successful and entered Cornell University in 1889 and graduated therefrom, Bachelor of Philosophy, with special mention in history, in 1894. During his college course he was assistant principal one year in the Rahway, N. J., High School. He expects to make teaching his profession. His specialty is history and political science. Whilst at college he was a member of several college societies, also a presiding officer of them. Since his graduation he has been chosen General Secretary of the Christian Association of the University. It is his intention before entering actively into teaching to spend two or three years at the University in graduate work.

Mr. Henry Watkeys (Master Mechanic L., N. A. & C. Ry. Co.), New Albany, Ind., writes July 16, 1891: "I am expecting soon from London a book of genealogy of the family my father belongs to. There is no public record in this country of his family. I have had marked success in tracing my mother's family—both her father's and mother's. Her father's name was Israel Potter. A Genealogy of the Potter Family in America (10 in number) has been published by Mudge, of Boston, and edited by Charles Edward Potter, of N. Y. The ancestor came from England and settled in Lynn, Mass., 1635. His name was Nicholas Potter. My mother's mother, Mary Rice, was sixth generation in descent of Edmund Rice who came from England and settled in Sudbury, Mass., 1638. There is a book of this family. My wife's grandmother was Patty Hopkins, a descendant of Stephen Hopkins who came to America in the Mayflower—1620. My wife's family name is Colman. The original ancestor to America was Thomas Colman who came from England and settled at Newbury, Mass., 1635. My wife's father was a descendant of the Thurston family. The original settler, Daniel Thurston, at Newbury, 1635. This family has a book. My wife is also a descendant of the Richardsons—her father's mother, Zeriah Richardson, was a descendant of Samuel Richardson who came from England and settled at Charlestown, Mass., 1636. The Richardsons have a book. I have a book of my daughter-in-law, Birdella's, mother's family—Huntingtons. She is descended from Simon Huntington who settled in Connecticut the latter part of 1600. Collis P. Huntington, president of the Pacific R. R., is great uncle to Birdella. I have a daughter-in-law in Syracuse, N. Y. Her mother's maiden name is Ruckel. They trace their descent from a German burgomaster, 1600. Adj. Gen. Ruckel of the State of Indiana is a member of the family. As I said above: Birdella M. Loveland Watkeys is a descendant of the Huntingtons. Her grandmother was a Huntington. From the Huntington Genealogy we have: Simon Huntington, b in England, d on board ship during his passage to America. The record in America shows that the Widow Margaret Huntington came to Roxbury, Mass., in 1633. William, eldest son of Simon and Margaret, appears in Salisbury, Mass., in 1640. Thomas, second son, resided in Windsor, Conn., 1656. Christopher was third son."

FREEMAN LOVELAND (116).

There appears to have been an interregnum in Mr. Loveland's family record from the time of Jemima's birth to Jerusha's. To Jemima's birth the record is found at Glastonbury. The record is resumed at Hebron, Conn., with the birth of Jerusha. From the regularity of births in this family we find room for others between these two. From the records of deeds we identify George as a son to a certainty (Deed Book 7, page 377): "By his father, Robert, and brother, Malachi." Again, by information furnished by Miss Mercy J. Dean, a granddaughter, residing at Vail's Gate, N. Y., we are enabled to determine that Eliphaz was a son. Robert³ Loveland moved from Glastonbury to Hebron after the birth of Jemima. From researches made by Prof. James Stevens Loveland we conclude Robert³ had a daughter, Ann, who m an Alcott. The names of George, Eliphaz and Ann are not found either at Glastonbury or Hebron on the records of birth, yet undoubtedly they were born in one or the other of these two places. The descendants of Eliphaz return Hebron as his birthplace. Jerusha's and Epaphroditus' births are recorded on the Hebron records. In 1728 the town of Glastonbury gave Robert³ Loveland permission to erect and to run a saw mill on Salmon Brook.

buried at Rootstown. He lost his life by the accidental discharge of a pistol.

A NOBLE LIFE.

The funeral services of Miss Mabel E. Bradshaw took place at the family residence, No. 762 Logan Street, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A large number of sympathizing friends were present, and Dr. H. M. Ladd, of the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the services. He spoke very tenderly from the words in John xiv.: "I will not leave you comfortless," etc. A male quartette rendered the selections "Thy Will be Done" and "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," in a very impressive manner. Beautiful flowers were placed about the casket, among which was a loving tribute from Miss Bradshaw's Sunday School class. After the services the body was borne to and placed in a vault at Lake View Cemetery. Miss Bradshaw came to Cleveland with her parents when she was about twelve years old, the family residence since 1869 being at the East End. Mr. Bradshaw is a well known citizen in that part of the city where the daughter was endeared to a large circle of friends by the purity of her life and her devotion to the good of others. She was very active, earnest and successful in Church and Sunday School work, and her ambition to do good on these and other lines finally lead her to accept, in 1881, a position as teacher in the Institute for Feeble Minded Youth, at Columbus, Ohio. She faithfully performed the arduous duties of her position in that institution for six years, when failing health compelled her to return to this city. For two years she had been a patient and at times a great sufferer from the disease which finally ended her life. —Cleveland, O., Leader and Herald, Thursday, March 6, 1890.

Farmer and teacher. She d at Middlefield, Nov. 19, 1837. She was a member of the Baptist Church at Westville, N. Y., and an amiable and exemplary woman. Mr. Northrop was three times married, by these wives he had twelve children. His third wife, Mrs. Amy Jackson Brewer, was a widow with four children. She was a descendant of Old Hickory. (With these four different sets of children, sixteen in number, we are told there was always the greatest harmony and good feeling. He moved to Wis. in 1840, was one of the pioneers of Walworth County. His house (near Elkhorn), a log one containing two rooms, on account of its size, was selected as a place to hold religious meetings. The first town meeting in the township (Lafayette) was held in his house. Game was abundant. Annually the Indians from their reservation passed his house on their way to Milwaukee to draw their pay from the government for lands they had vacated. Milwaukee then boasted two log hotels, and gave but little evidence of its present size and wealth. Mr. Northrop was held in high estimation by his fellow townsmen, and held many offices of trust. He was always an efficient member of the school board, and for many years was school inspector. As an educator he had no superior in the county. He gave all his children a liberal education, and several of them were teachers. Children born in Middlefield:

Where your young, stainless heart may repose,
'Tis the heart where your dear mother nestled and clung
And poured out her joys and her woes.

SHAWNEE RESERVE, JOHNSON Co., }
KAN. TER., June 10, 1857. }

DEAR GRANDMOTHER:— This is the anniversary of my advent into "Bleeding Kansas," and I know no better way to celebrate it than to write to distant friends, and first on the list comes dear old grandmother. I will give you a summary of what I have seen, heard and done in Kansas. Our advent was in rather a gloomy time when "wars and rumors of wars" were rife in the land. It was about the time of the burning of the Free State Hotel at Lawrence. We were advised and cautioned frequently, but never threatened or molested. As I had no hand in any disturbance I cannot speak from experience, and you no doubt have exaggerated accounts of what somebody heard of somebody's doings in abundance. Suffice to say, I have seen the ruins of several houses, among the rest the hotel at Lawrence, and have heard truthful men say that their houses were ransacked and burned, and they obliged to flee for their lives. One old man from Iowa, Judge Wakefield, from the same county we were from, had his house burned and some two thousand dollars worth of property destroyed. A Mr. Jenkins, whose residence we passed on our way into the Territory, had lost a team of horses, and his brother was then in custody. Another man, I forget his name, was at the Free State Hotel when it was robbed, his trunks were broken open, $200 in money taken from them, and all his and his wife's clothing taken from them and carried away or thrown into the street. On the other hand, the Free State booters were not idle. Lane's men took sixteen horses and mules from one plantation, also sixteen blankets and buffalo robes and what saddles and bridles, etc., they could find. I was pleased to hear the old slave holder tell about it. He said they were very cool and gentlemanly about it, but would not give him a receipt. As for the election of delegates to represent the Territory at Washington, no one of either party denies its illegality. There were scores of men from Missouri who were free to confess that they went over and voted and returned to their homes in Missouri. All the elections that have been held in the Territory have been outrageous frauds, and the present election for delegates to a convention to form a State Constitution is the greatest fraud of all. They have the census list before them and if the Free State men were four to one they would erase the names or write them wrong so that a majority of pro-slavery votes would appear on the list before they came to election. My name which I gave them, J. N. Northrop, plainly written, was written John Norfof. J. B. Alexander was John Alexander, etc., etc. Nearly every Free State man's name about Fort Riley, that was put on the list, was wrong. But, thank the Lord, the people were too sharp to be caught in their well baited trap. Let Northern Dough Faces say what they will, every one that knows anything about it knows that the Free State men are right in not recognizing or having anything to do with the election. * * * *

My husband was deputy postmaster here in 1854, and soon after deputy sheriff. In 1859 elected sheriff, which office he held until 1862, when he enlisted in the 111th Ill. Vols. Elected Captain of Co. After the war was appointed revenue assessor for this district and continued in the office until it was abolished. In 1873 was appointed postmaster, which office he held until his death, Sept. 5, 1877. He died of disease contracted in the army. He was an honest, upright man, a member in high standing in the fraternity of Masons, and beloved by family and friends. In the fall of 1846 my father came west, first settling at Dixon, Illinois. He remained there one year with his family and then removed to Rockford, Illinois, making his settled home at that place. The female seminary there was noted for its systematic and thorough training. I attended the seminary until 1855, when a change of residence was made, my father locating in Salem. A milder climate was the object. I married with Mr. Joseph Shultz, Sept. 6, 1860, and settled in Salem. After the death of my husband I was appointed P. M. by Pres. R. B. Hayes, reappointed by Pres. Arthur and served eight years and three months, my time expiring with change of administration. My father, James Madison Rudd, lives with me and is in his 79th year."

We were in swimming at the time and I could have saved him had I known what was the matter. He had a cramp. Mother died in 1868. I was in the Regular Army when she died. I served five years in the Regulars and two in the Volunteers. I have had enough of army life. I belonged to Troop E, 8th U. S. Cav. I was stationed at Fort Lapawai, Idaho Territory and discharged at Fort Wingate, New Mexico, in 1871. Our troop started from N. Y.,

Oct. 1, 1866 and went by the way of the Isthmus of Panama arriving in California on the 26th of the month. We then moved to Vancouver, W. T., then to the Columbia River, then to Wallatilla, then Fort Lapawai, on the Nez Perces Reservation. In 1868 we were relieved by the 1st Cavalry and ordered to Portland, Oregon, and from there to San Francisco, then to Los Angeles, then to Fort Mahara, A. T. Our business in Arizona was to scout for Indians. We were constantly on the scout being in the saddle from fifteen to twenty days at a time, whilst operating from camps Willow Grove, Toll Gate, and Fort Whipple near Prescott. We killed many Indians. Being relieved by the Third Cavalry we were ordered to Fort Wingate where we remained until our time expired. My mothers' name before marriage was Wells. I am a small, delicate boy, weigh only 278 pounds. My brother is like me. We both take after our mother who was quite a large woman. I am now a Locomotive Engineer on the N. Y. & H. R. R. R. I have worked for the company seventeen years."

In 1878 they moved to York, Neb., and the next year to Amboy, Webster Co., Neb., where he was an employe of the B. & M. R. R. Co. In 1880 he moved to Riverton, Neb. In 1882 he resigned his position with the R. R. Co. and moved onto a farm five miles from Riverton, and in 1885 traded his farm for a stock of hardware and furniture and engaged in trade until the fall of 1888. In 1890 we find this family at Kearney, Neb. Here he served as foreman of a construction gang in the employ of the Kearney & Black Hills R. R. Co. He moved to Monticello in May, 1891, where he is now engaged in contracting and building houses. He is a temperance worker and member of the Good Templars' Order. He also belongs to the Masons and Knights of Labor. In this latter order he served as Master Workman two terms in succession. Rep. Cong. Ch. Children, first born in Washington, second at Monticello, the rest at Riverton:

Harry Loveland, who died at Monticello in 1892, was an exemplary boy and possessed those qualities in abundance that go to make up a gentleman in the true sense of the word. Honest, industrious and frugal, thoughtful, kind and considerate, he endeared himself to all, and was beloved by all his acquaintances. He stood well in his studies at school, and received due recognition. He was fond of reading, and was familiar with all parts of the Bible. In religious views Harry was a strong Methodist, holding firm to their articles of faith. As the end drew near his courage failed him not, and he was willing to go hence. Unlike most boys of his age, he was free from the bad habits and vices that curse the present generation, and his life stands out as a good example for his playmates. The funeral services were held at the M. E. Church by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Liddle. His classmates were present to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom they loved. "Death lies on him like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower of all the field," but which some day will vanish like the dew before the morning sun. Till then, Harry, we bid thee farewell.—H. W. OBITUARY.

Mr. William W. Pearson died on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28, 1875, after a long illness, in the 80th year of his age. Our first recollection of the deceased was when he was employed in the office of his father, Bevan Pearson, who was prothonotary, etc., under the nine years' governorship of Simon Snyder.—His life afterwards, for many years, was spent in clearing out and improving the Pearson mill property on the Lackawannock, from which, in our boyish days, we captured many a string of speckled trout.—Mr. Pearson was an industrious and energetic business man when in his prime, always generous and kind in his nature, well read and intelligent, and a hearty hater of anything mean or dishonest.—His nature and walk in life secured the respect and confidence of all who knew him.—To do what was right in all cases seemed to be his great aim, and for this his fellow-citizens honored him.—At the age of fifteen he helped to recruit for the War of 1812. His great ancestor came over with William Penn, and he himself was of Quaker descent. The infirmities of his later years took him out of active life, and to the young generation he was less known, but with the aged and those of middle life there remains a respect for his memory and upright character that will only be obliterated when they follow him to his resting place in the bosom of mother earth.—By a companion of his boyhood.

Sophronia Loveland Pearson died at the residence of J. M. Orr, near Fredonia, Pa., May 5, 1891. She was long a consistent member of the M. E. Church, charitable in all her judgments, a kind and obliging neighbor, a tender and loving mother, and highly esteemed by all who knew her. Her father's family came from Massachusetts to the State of New York where she was born in 1816. She was one of twenty-two children, three of whom survive her. Several times during her illness, which was lingering and painful, she said that now she only needed to pray for patience to await God's time to take her. She preceeded her youngest son, Charlie, by only eight days to the better land. He also had been a member of the church from his youth. The deceased had been a widow for sixteen years. Of a family of ten children five survive her. Her funeral took place from the residence of J. M. Orr, and was conducted by Rev. Shepard, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Sherrard, of the Presbyterian Church. Interment in the Pearson Grave Yard.—Fredonia Paper.

HON. SOLOMON M. LOVELAND.

Memorial services on the death of Hon. Solomon M. Loveland were held in the House of Representatives of the Pennsylvania General Assembly, March 1, 1883. From the journal of the House we quote:

MR. LEVI MORRISON.—Mr. Speaker: If I were to consult my own feelings I would remain silent on this occasion. But as Mr. Loveland was from my own county of Mercer, I feel it my duty to say a few words as a tribute of respect to the memory of my departed friend and predecessor, whose death has been formally announced to this House. Hon. Solomon M. Loveland was born in Erie County, Pa., April 14, 1828. He received a common school education, was brought up on a farm and continued to follow the same occupation until his death, which occurred at his home in Fredonia, Nov. 9, 1881. The deceased commenced life poor, as nearly all men of mark have in our history. For over twenty years I knew Mr. Loveland, and during all that time his life and example were exemplary and worthy to be imitated by any young man. He filled many offices of trust and honor. In 1880 his fellow citizens elected him a member of the General Assembly of this State, which office he filled with honor to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituency. He devoted all his time and energies to his office. He had clear convictions of right, was an honest, upright man, a consistent member of the Baptist Church for many years, always courteous in his manners, kindly in disposition, and amiable in character. Indeed, a good and noble Christian man, respected and loved at home and by his colleagues at the State capital. In his death a devoted wife has lost a kind and indulgent husband, the children a loving father, and society a good citizen and public-spirited man. He now lives

"Beyond the smiling and the weeping,
Beyond the farewell and the greeting,
Beyond the sowing and the reaping."

Peace to his memory, and may we emulate his virtues.

MR. DEXLY.—Mr. Speaker: As I was one of the committee to draft resolutions relating to the death of Hon. Solomon M. Loveland, it is perhaps meet for me to say a few words in honor of his memory. Although I was not personally acquainted with him, yet representing as he did the same section of our State that gave me birth, I feel the more at liberty to drop a kind word in sympathy with his friends at home and his fellow members of this House, who join in common condolence over the loss of a good and useful citizen and an efficient member of the State Legislature. Mr. Speaker, it is common on occasions of this kind, when Nations and States mourn the loss of statesmen, princes, and warriors, to cover up their faults and follies, to speak only of the noble acts of their lives, and it is perhaps well; but in the midst of sad memories here to-night I am happy to say that on this occasion there is no need to hide anything of the past, but I am perfectly willing to let the sunlight of perfect day reveal every feature of the past.

It is not brilliancy of character that shines most brightly in an hour like this; deeds of daring in the warrior, great oratory in the statesman are, it is true, stars in the galaxy of noble deeds; but when life has ebbed away, the brightest jewel by far that remains is the memory of a noble, honest, stainless life; I can say (without, I think, a breath of suspicion to the contrary) that this was the character of the late member from Mercer, whose memory we to-night cherish. Educated in the common schools; reared up in the peaceful avocation of the farmer; justice of the peace; school director; brigade inspector; burgess, and then, in the year 1881, Representative of his county in this House, performing his duties here with unwavering fidelity; and then, ere his mission of usefulness was ended, in the zenith of mental activity cut off like a "shock of corn", not fully ripe, he has been gathered to his fathers—he has gone the way of all the earth. Death, come when it may, is sad and melancholy, but after all to the true Christian (and we are satisfied he was one) much of the sting is taken away * * * To conclude, let me say, in behalf of this Assembly, to the friends of the departed one, in the language of the great and good Dr. Franklin. He says: "We console you; you have lost a dear and valuable relation; but why lament, since in death we part with all pains, or possibility of pains? Our friend and we were invited abroad to a party of pleasure; his chair was ready first, and he has gone before us. Why should we sorrow since we are soon to follow and know where to find him?" Let us take this monition to ourselves: "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

MR. LANDIS.—Mr Speaker: I feel it my duty to say a few words in my humble way on this occasion. I owe it to my departed friend to pay a brief tribute to his memory. I first met Mr. Loveland at the opening of the session of 1881. I met him almost daily during that session and we became quite intimate. Through our frequent associations I got to know him well. It was the only way one could learn to know him as he was a very quiet man; rather reserved and not ostentatious. The more thoroughly I got to know the man, and the more I learned to know of him, the more I respected and esteemed him. When the fall of the Speaker's gavel announced the final adjournment of the Legislature of 1881, there was not a man in that House in whose indisputable honesty and sterling integrity I had more faith than I had in his. * * * There have been those occupying the seats which we now occupy who came here to promote their own pecuniary interests rather than the good of the people, or the good of the State. * * * There have been some among those who sat in these seats in days gone by who were over ambitious, and for fear of giving offense to those who were recognized as "the powers that be," permitted themselves to be driven to support what their better judgment taught them to be wrong.

There have been those among our predecessors who were so over anxious to secure the passage of measures in which they felt a personal interest that they gave their support to questionable measures in order to secure the friends of the latter to carry through their own. There have been those here, who, although their intentions were good and their purposes pure, and who would have spurned a bribe of so much in cash, fell into the hands of those who poured sweet chants of praise into their ears, and who dealt out "that baser coin," which Chesterfield said, "is the necessary pocket money at court," and not a few have been impoverished by that sneaking art called flattery, who could not have been seduced by a chest of gold.

There have been others here who allowed threats, abuse, vilification, or ridicule to lead them away from the path of duty when their convictions admonished them to move straight on.

Solomon M. Loveland belonged to neither of this class of legislators. An improper consideration was no temptation to him. No flattery could move him. No amount of threatening would have brought the answer. He had the utmost contempt for that infamous practice in legislation known as log-rolling. All the scoffs and sneers at reformers did not influence him in the least. Mercer county honored itself as much as it honored him by sending him as one of her representatives. Men like him are the kind of men wanted here to serve as lawmakers. Let us thank God that the number has of late years been gradually increasing in this Hall. Let us trust and hope that the Divine Spirit may so work and assert itself among the good people of Pennsylvania that men of honesty and integrity, men of sufficient nerve and backbone to follow their own convictions wherever they lead them, and such only, may be chosen to revise, amend, and enact our laws. * * * Let us rather labor in doing good. Let our highest aim be to contribute what we can toward making men better, making society purer, elevating this people, and making this government a mighty engine in pushing forward the divine object of the Almighty in instituting government among men.

MR. STRUBB.—Mr. Speaker: * * * His private and public record is the best eulogy that can be pronounced. * * * As has already been stated, he was loved and honored by the people of his district, respected and esteemed by all who knew him. He was a man of integrity, diligence, energy, and courage. While a member of this House he performed his whole duty, serving both his constituents and the Commonwealth honestly and faithfully. But he has been called away from labor to rest. As the sun, when it sinks below the horizon, leaves its reflected rays to guide us through the night, so his example remains for our guidance, bidding us be faithful and come up higher. We miss his presence and mourn our loss, but his good deeds and life live in our memories. His march was heavenward, his future glorious, and he has been garnered with the golden sheaves of immortality.

MR. ZIEGLER (The Chairman).—Gentlemen of the Assembly: The report which has just been offered and adopted in relation to the death of the gentleman who was a former member of this House is certainly eminently worthy and proper. It testifies to the excellence and worth of this gentleman, not only in private life, but in his official life. * * * It has been said that man does not die; that what we call death is not death, but transition. And it is reasonable, from the tributes paid to this man, to suppose that in the other life he is but treading the green fields and walking in the pleasant places where the mercy of God blooms on all sides of him, and where there is no withering and no decaying. The rationality of man is, as life itself, a gift from God, and that cannot die; it lives to all eternity; and as he uses his rationality in his life, so in the plenitude of God's mercy will He give him a place in the other land. I feel, because I have progressed far in life, that the human race is but a grand army passing on. One falls here, another there. The shadows of us all are lengthening, and the time will soon come, if there is a place beyond, when we too, must lay down this that we call life and assume another.

ELIPHAZ¹ LOVELAND (Robert³, Robert², Thomas¹) was born in Hebron, Conn., Dec. 31, 1745, d at Franklin, N. Y., Aug. 28, 1823, m at H., 1771, Jemima Porter, cousin of the Rev. Dr. David Porter, of Catskill, N. Y. She died at H., leaving four children. He m 2nd at H., 1788, Mrs. Rachel Kneeland, b at H., 1746, d at F., July 19, 1812, a. 66. Her maiden name was Kneeland and her former husband was her cousin. She brought to Mr. Loveland's home four young daughters: Rachel, b Feb'y 19, 1769, m Azel Bowers; Sylvia, b March 23, 1772, m Abner Loveland; Mendwell, b Sept. 3, 1776, m Smith; and Ruth, m Eliphaz⁵ Loveland. Eliphaz¹ Loveland was in the Rev. War. Entered service Jan'y 10, 1778, in a Militia Reg., Capt. Dewey's Co., for a term of two months in R. I. (see Conn. Roster, p. 529). Sometime in the summer of 1791, he and two of his sons came to Franklin looking for a place to settle and make them a home. They came to Abel Buell's cabin and liking the location offered him one hundred silver dollars for it which Buell accepted, and held possession until the next spring. This was Loveland's first visit to Franklin. The farm which he bought had only three acres chopped. We learn from the history of the town that his family arrived there from Marlborough, Conn., Feb. 10, 1794—Marlborough was formed from parts of Glastonbury, Hebron and Colchester. On account of sickness in his family he could not move them sooner, two children being born in the meantime. Doubtless, he added to his improvements, clearing land and raising some crops for the support of his family. The name of Eliphaz

Loveland not appearing upon the town records of either Glastonbury, or Hebron, at first led to some difficulty in fixing his line of descent (see p. 105 of this volume). Through the recollection of Rev Artemus Dean, D. D., and his sister Mercy Jane, and Mr. Chauncey Hitchcock of Lake Geneva, Wis., descendants, we were enabled to establish his line to a certainty. Mr. Hitchcock visited Franklin in 1885 and copied many records from the grave-stones, which records are found in their place herein. We are also indebted to Miss Lillian Mills, descendant of Margery⁵ Loveland for a copy of the records from Eliphaz⁷ family Bible in her possession. He and his family were members of the Presbyterian church. Children, first seven b at Hebron, the last at Franklin:

- 261. i. Eliphaz⁵, b March 19, 1772, m Ruth Kneeland.

Mrs. O. E. Bennett writes from Lanesboro, Pa., Sept. 19, 1887: "My dear friend George Loveland: I have not the information you ask, but will get it. I was glad to hear from you and have often wondered if you were yet in the land of the living. I have been unfortunate and am a helpless invalid. I stepped off the side of my back stairs, my head striking a stone below. I run down by degrees until last April. The doctor said I ruptured a blood vessel. The fall affected me all over and I have not been able to walk since last April. My fingers are bad as you see by my writing. I wish I could get relief. From your stranger friend." Previous to writing the above she wrote: "You see all our family (Elephaz⁶) have gone out of the world strangely: Father and two of my sisters were killed by lightning; mother through mistake took saltpeter for salts; Susan Northup died of mineral poisoning; her father became deranged in his mind and took his own life, and her mother was either murdered or burned alive. My little sisters were not church members, but they were Christian children. Margery the oldest, had a place of worship in a grove and spent much time there with her mates studying the Bible. Sister Ruth, Sarepta, and I, joined the Pres. Church each at the age of twelve, Eunice at seventeen. Ruth and I married Methodist men and went with them. I have the consolation of feeling that they were all ready to go. Their work was done and they were transplanted in a better clime."

Mrs. Bennett never recovered from this fall. - J. B. L.

The appearance of such men as Joel D. Loveland upon the floor of the Assembly will forebode brighter days and better times.

If there were more men of this stamp sent to the Legislature we should soon feel that the reform, we have so long sounded, had set in, and the good time coming was almost here. Mr. Loveland is a gentleman who has ever made merit his guiding star; he makes his own sunshine and carries it around with him.—D. L. WING, State Senator.

OBITUARY.

DIED—In the town of Wheatfield, Nov. 25th, 1881, of typhoid fever, Hon. Joseph D. Loveland, aged 44 years.

The subject of this sketch was born at Bethany, Genesee Co., this State, and removed to this county about 35 years since. His father took up a large farm near Hall's Station, in the town of Wheatfield, upon which the deceased continually resided up to the time of his death.

Mr. L. followed agricultural pursuits, in which he was quite successful. The quiet of his pleasant country home was first invaded about ten years since, when his townsmen called him to represent them upon the Board of Supervisors. He served in this capacity for several terms, and rendered such signal service to his party and county that he came to be looked upon as a man fitted for yet higher and more honorable positions. It will be remembered that while upon the Board he took the principal part in the investigation into the reports of the county Superintendent of the poor, which disclosed a corrupt state of affairs, and which led to litigation out of which the County realized a considerable sum in payment of the deficiency on the part of that official (a Republican). At the close of his services upon the Board, the voters of the First Assembly District of this county looked to Mr. Loveland as their representative in the Assembly of this State. He was nominated and elected by a handsome majority to the Legislature of '78 and '79, over Mr. Benedict, a strong and popular candidate in his party. The career of Mr. Loveland in the law-making body of this great State was marked by such good ability and such integrity as to deserve more than a passing notice. This District never had a more able or more honest legislator. Almost his first act was to set his face like flint against the tide of legislation in favor of corporations which was inundating the State.

A careful scrutiny of his entire record in the lower House will fail to reveal a single act that by any interpretation can be construed as in favor of the corporations and against the people. A distinguished official once remarked to the writer of these lines, in speaking of Mr. Loveland's career in the Assembly, "that he did not believe that Mr. Loveland was ever approached by a lobbyist." He was a man above price and above temptation, and as he was the sworn foe of corrupt railroad and New York City charter legislation, so he was the open enemy of all private jobs. Another conspicuous feature in the labors of Mr. Loveland while at Albany, was his early identification with the cause of Reform in State Administration, inaugurated by Gov. Tilden, and then being carried forward by Gov. Robinson. In the bitter contests in the Legislature of that winter, over some of the appointments of the Governor, as Mr. Fairchild and others, the vote of the representative from the First District of Niagara County will be found recorded in favor of the iron and honest old Governor. Upon these questions Mr. L. left no room for doubt. He was thoroughly imbued with the principle that honesty and strict economy in the financial affairs of the State must be secured at whatever cost, and he would not permit his own party, or any section or faction thereof, to stand in the way of such accomplishment.

During the stay of Mr. L. at the State capital there came up a contest from one of the Districts in New York City, between a Republican and a Tammany Democrat, as to which should be accorded a seat in the Legislature. Mr. L. honestly believed the Republican to be entitled to the seat, and so voted, and that one act cost him his re-election at the hands of certain men in his own party, but is nevertheless to-day the brightest star in the crown of his rejoicing. Space will not permit a further review of the labors of our lamented representative in the councils of this great State. Suffice to say that few if any had a brighter record. We come now to speak briefly of our friend as related to the Democratic party of this county. We feel that we do not overstate when we say that every Democrat of the Cataract County feels that in the death of Hon. Joseph D. Loveland he has sustained a personal loss.

The deceased was a life-long Democrat, deeply attached to the principles of Democracy. He sincerely believed that the Democratic party was the party of the people and of the masses. He believed, as many of us have heard him eloquently state, that this great party stood between the laboring man and the growing and overshadowing power of the Government banks and other great and greedy corporations. He believed that the party of Jefferson was the friend of the poor as against the rich; the party of equality, the party of State rights as against centralization and monarchy. We all remember his presiding over our County mass meeting at the opera house in the last Presidential canvass, and of the burning words that fell from his lips, some of which we have here reproduced.

The deceased was an acknowledged leader and chieftain among us, to whose wise judgment and rare foresight, we were ever willing to give heed. He was a member of the County Committee for several years and spared not means or time in the effective organization of his party. No important political gatherings have been held for the past ten years at which he has not been present and taken an active part. He was a delegate to the State convention in 1880, at Syracuse, where he was warmly greeted by his many distinguished political associates throughout the State. Mr. Loveland, perhaps, enjoyed the intimate acquaintance of as many leading Democratic politicians in different parts of the State as any Democrat in this County. In his social relations Mr. L. was genial and courteous.

It was the privilege of the writer to count him as among his most loved and valuable friends. We mourn his sudden and untimely death with unaffected sorrow. The large gathering at the obsequies at Bear Ridge on Monday, attest the sincere affection and esteem in which the deceased was held in his native town. Said Elder Foote: "We are attending the funeral of no ordinary man; a man fitted, by force of uncommon ability and strict uprightness, to fill any position in the gift of his friends; a man whose counsels were ever sought by his neighbors, and whose place they feel they cannot fill."

Mr. Loveland was a man of robust health and habit. He first complained about two weeks since, at which time he made his will and set his large estate in order. He was not regarded as dangerously ill up to within a few hours of his death. He leaves one sister, Mrs. Clark, of Beach Ridge, a widow, and four or five small children, the eldest about a dozen years. We close these lines upon the unexpected and sad demise of our dear friend by especially extending our sympathy to the bereaved family. In his domestic life, as elsewhere, Mr. Loveland was a model man. We can not bind up the broken heart of the gentle woman who so sincerely mourns the loss of her husband, nor can we smooth the pathway of those children so early bereft of a father's tender care. We can only commend them to the All-Wise and All-Good. The ways of Providence are inscrutable. We can not see why one should be so cut down ere his life had reached the noon-mark on the dial and in the flower and fruitage of his years. But this we know, that in the Divine economy, whatever is, is right. In the reaping-time, in the harvest-home of that brighter and better land, we shall meet the loved and precious ones gone before, and then all things shall be made plain.—M. S. B.

277a. i. Ellen Augusta^r Hitchcock, b Oct. 27, 1839, m Henry P. Belcher.

Mr. Chauncey Hitchcock was brought up on a farm. He united with the Congregational Church in 1831. He left his home at the age of twenty to obtain an education preparatory to entering the ministry. In his second college year his health became so impaired that he was compelled to give up his books and take up outdoor life. We find him in Springfield, Pa., in 1836-7, teaching school; in Illinois in 1837, and in Franklin in 1838, where he was married. The health of his father-in-law failing, and he having no son, he and his wife were persuaded to take charge of and carry on the farm, which he did until the death of Mr. Loveland in 1851. He then purchased his father's farm in Berkshire and lived there until the fall of 1870. His wife becoming a confirmed invalid, by advice of his brother in Chicago, Illinois, he sold his farm and settled at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, prolonging, as he believes, the life of his wife ten years by the change. He says of his wife: "She was a devoted Christian, of a lovely disposition and everybody's friend." She united with the Congregational Church in 1830 or '31. Mr. Hitchcock is a man of more than ordinary intelligence. He is a fluent speaker, of gentlemanly habits and benevolent disposition. By industry and economy he has accumulated a competence for old age. He was a deacon in the Congregational Church at Franklin and Berkshire, and an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Lake Geneva until the change in its form of government.

Mrs. Mercy Loveland Merrick was born in Tolland County, Conn., 1790, and removed with her parents to Franklin, N. Y., Feb'y 10, 1794, where she remained until her marriage at the old homestead, called "Oak Hill" in the town of Franklin.

"Blest is the daughter who hath a good mother."

Fortune was with Mercy in having one of the best of mothers, for Mrs. Loveland, nee Kneeland, possessed those New England traits of character which have contributed so much to make our country emblematical of thrift and enlightened republicanism. Then and there it was the correct thing to be a Presbyterian, and of course young Mercy early joined the church, in which she remained until she died in Illinois at the advanced age of eighty-eight years, piously laboring for the good of the cause of Christ. She never doubted that her own was the best organization. Her young husband, Sylvester Merrick, was not a church member when they married, but became such some years afterward, and in his later life they both enjoyed the same pious sympathy. Mr. Merrick was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church many years until his death. Fortune did not smile on this worthy couple. Elder Merrick being a farmer, found it easy to practice industry and close economy, and necessary to live frugally. Being unpracticed in speculative arts, he was often the prey of designing men. He could not accumulate. One sad sequel to it all was the want of means, whereby he and his wife could ever revisit relatives and scenes left in eastern homes, or whereby lost health could be regained by change and travel; but while living, she preserved a vivid recollection of the old home, dear relatives, and youthful scenes. Mrs. Merrick had a vigorous mind, though enfeebled body, caused by malaria and bad climate. She physically possessed great vital force which led to longevity in spite of unfavorable surroundings. She had one full brother, Hezekiah Loveland, who was drowned in early manhood at the Narrows, in the Hudson river. She had also one own sister, Sally, who married the Rev. Artemas Dean, of Newburg, N. Y., both deceased. She also had a half-brother and sister, and a step-sister, all of whom she left in 1822, removing to Chautauqua Co., town of Sheridan, N. Y., with her husband and children. They resided here twelve years, during which time three more children were born to these parents. In 1834 the entire family removed to Sandusky county, Ohio, west of the town of Lower Sandusky, now Fremont, Ohio. In this new and miasmatic country, Mrs. Merrick soon lost health and comfort, suffering from ague and kindred diseases; then muscular rheumatism made her an invalid the balance of her life, and finally her husband died of malarial troubles in the 62d year of his age. The rest of her life was spent in Kankakee Co., Ill., living with her children, with more comfort than in earlier life. They had six children.—By DR. GEORGE C. MERRICK, Kankakee, Ill.

Miss Anna M.⁷ Dean writes, May 4, 1891: "Word has reached me that aunt Mercy J. Dean, of Middletown, N. Y., has gone to meet the Savior she loved and served. The 17th of April she was taken with la grippe; pneumonia set in and on the 20th she passed away, conscious, calm, and longing to go. At the funeral her pastor said: 'Her life at the Home had been a benediction to them.' Her work is done and well done, and now it is well with her."

Rev. A.⁶ Dean writes, Dec. 7, 1891: "My sister, Mercy Jane Dean died in Middletown, N. Y., April 20, 1891, and was buried in the Bethlehem Cemetery, Cornwall, Orange Co., N. Y. Her life was devoid of incident. When eight years of age she was studying Virgil with half a dozen young men whom my father was preparing for college, and got her daily lesson of two hundred verses (lines). One day her classmates made her believe they were going to learn four hundred verses. She got the four hundred, but they didn't and they never tried that game on her again. In 1830-31 she attended the famous school in Litchfield, Conn., conducted by Mrs. Pierce and the Rev. Mr. Bruce. In later years she was employed as governess in different families in Orange and Dutchess Counties; but spent the most of her life at home. When about sixteen years of age she was visited with a long and dangerous sickness from the effects of which she never fully recovered. After my sister Rachel's death, the old home was broken up and Mercy removed to Middletown where she died after a short illness of only three days. Her disease was the grippe terminating in pneumonia. My sister had an unusually balanced intellect; her memory was retentive; her common sense quite uncommon. She was grave in manner, not given to gush, reticent and retiring. She was remarkable for her conscientiousness, was an earnest Christian and was as near faultless in her life as any one I ever knew. Take her all in all, she was a sister to be confided in, to be honored and loved, and to be praised in the gates."

He was born in Taunton, Mass., was frequently out during the Revolutionary war, and had the command of a company that was called out to support the Courts during Shay's Rebellion. Joshua⁴ Dean who married Keziah Paddock was grandfather of Rev. Artemas, and Ebenezer³ Dean, born Feb'y 24, 1701-2, died July 30, 1774, married Rachel Allen, who died March 3, 1768, in her 75th year, was his great-grandfather. He and his son Joshua marched in the same army in defense of this country in the old French war. Benjamin² Dean, great-great-grandfather settled in Taunton, married Jan'y 6, 1680, Sarah Williams. He died between Feb'y 2, 1722-3, and April 14, 1725. They had twelve children. Walter¹ Dean, great-great-great-grandfather and his brother John came to this country about 1637. They came from Chard near Taunton, England. They arrived at Boston first, stopped a year at Dorchester, and then came with others to Taunton, Mass. They took up their farms on the west bank of the river about one mile from the center of Taunton. Houses occupying the same lots as those erected by them, and nearly the exact sites, are at this day (1890) owned and occupied by the descendants of each. The road which passed their dwellings has been called Dean street to this day. Both took the Freeman's oath at Plymouth, Dec. 4, 1638."

Rev. Artemas Dean, son of Rev. Artemas and Sarah Loveland, writes: "Near fifty years ago the record of the Deans was looked up and the first three generations this side published. The butler of Edward the Confessor was a Dean. The line is somewhat distinguished, embracing knights, lords, and high officials. I have the Dean Coat of Arms. My grandfather Dean married a Stowbridge and one of the tribe is looking up the record. The father of Mary Bell, my daughter-in-law, the Rev. Benjamin Franklin Marabel, D. D., was born in Halifax Co., Virginia, and her mother, Mary Amelia Faison, was born in Sampson Co., N. C. My father was of the sixth generation in descent from Walter Dean, who came over from Taunton, England, in 1637. Family surnames began to be used about the time of William the Conqueror. Maria Boardman was room mate to my wife at school, and one of her best friends."—Miss Boardman was the wife of 79 (see L. G. Vol. I., p. 104).

CALISTA CURTIS LOVELAND.

Family 68, P. 180, Vol. I.

Calista Curtis Loveland was born at Chagrin Falls, Ohio, February 23, 1813. She was the third in birth of a family of nine children. Her great ancestor, William Curtis, came from England to America in 1632 and settled in Roxbury, Mass. Her parents, Josiah and Mary Rockwell Curtis, came to Ohio in 1810. Soon after Calista's birth, October, 1814, they removed to Huron County, settling on a farm in New Haven Township. This family was of the first settlers of this section. In this new home Mrs. Loveland spent her young life, going out from it to another in the same neighborhood where passed her remaining years. When seventeen she united with the Free Baptist Church at Greenfield, now Stenben, Ohio, and in 1838, when a Free Baptist Church was organized near her home, she became a charter member of it. She was faithful unto death.

She was married to John Loveland, Nov. 3, 1831, assuming the care of his two young sons, John B. and Wm. W. She bore Mr. Loveland ten children: George W., Mary E., Elizabeth C., Lafayette, Reuben R., Almira J., Amelia A., Oscar A., Flora A. and Florilla. Of this family of twelve children, five survive her: The first two, Almira, Oscar and Flora. Her husband died in 1890. Mrs. Loveland was a pioneer mother, and in common with the wives and mothers of her generation spun and wove with hand wheels and looms the wool and flax for the wearing apparel of herself and family. In these employments and in the management of her household affairs she had few superiors. She bore her full share in the battle of life. The forest made room for home and cultivated fields. The privations and hardships of pioneer life fled at the touch of toil and time.

Father and mother Loveland from the first looked expectantly forward to the time when they could sit under their own vine and fig tree. Human voices gave command, the forest trees stepped aside and their toil was in a measure rewarded. They both lived to build up a pleasant home and to see their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren successfully establishing themselves in comfortable and happy homes. Not a stain of crime rests on their house. Their descendants are fast attaining that permanency of character which renders life happy. In all of this our mother, under God, has been a most potent factor. Endowed with an instinct to see the right she never swerved in her purpose to enforce it among her children. In 1881 she and her husband celebrated their golden wedding. Among the many good words spoken on the occasion by her children, we remember the following:

"Looking back over the past we can recall no act or word on your part that was not actuated by love and wishes for our good. Your lives have been a bright and golden example of what home and home influences may do. In future years we will recall this day as the proudest of our lives. We thank you for your rich legacy of paternal love and care. We feel that no truer Christians ever lived than our father and mother. We rise up to call you blessed."

Mrs. Loveland was a great sufferer from disease the last few years of her life. She bore all with Christian patience and resignation. She died at her home at 2:30 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, October 16, 1894, aged 81 years, 7 months and 23 days.

She, the kind neighbor and faithful friend, she, whose arms of love ever surrounded her children, she, who made soft the pillow of the dying, is called to the substantial glories of the heavenly world. The hands of this Christian mother beckon us all on to the promised legacy of eternal life,—J. B. L.

CURTIS FAMILY, P. 199, VOL. I.

WILLIAM⁶ CURTISS (John⁵, William⁴, Eustace³, William², John¹) was born in London, Eng., married there Elizabeth, sister of the Apostle John Eliot. Among the Indian benefactors none took a deeper interest in them than John Eliot. He learned their language and translated the Bible into it. He was born in England in 1604 and came to Boston in 1631, and in 1632 was settled as a minister at Roxbury, Mass. It was here he began to take a deep interest in the Indians whom he believed to be descendants of the lost tribes of Israel.

William Curtiss and his wife Elizabeth embarked with their family on the ship Lyon for America, June 22, 1632, and landed at Scituate, Mass., Dec. 16, 1632. Farmer. He died at Roxbury, 1634, and, so far as we know, was the progenitor of all bearing the name of Curtiss or Curtis in the United States. He was a younger son of John⁵ Curtis, gentleman, of London, to whom the arms and title were confirmed May 9, 1632, in the 8th year of the reign of Charles I. The Arms are thus described:

A shield with three ducal coronets surmounted by a lion with his foot upon the shield, and these words: Sapere Aude (dare to be wise).

The Curtis name in England so far back as ascertained was Sir John¹ of Malestock, Warwick. Allowing thirty years to a generation would make him a contemporary of Henry VI. of the House of Lancaster. The Curtis "bearings" have descended from him in regular order to his son William² and grandson Eustace³, both of the same manor. Then next to William⁴ (son of Eustace) of Hatton, Warwick, and then to William's son, Sir John⁵ Curtis, gentleman, of London, aforesaid. The "bearings" of the latter, are doubtless continued in the English families to the present time.

We now pass to the American ancestor: One of the earliest town grants of land in Roxbury was to William⁶ Curtis. He was appointed Town Surveyor of Lands. In 1652, his widow (Elizabeth), of whom frequent mention is made in the town histories of Woodbury, and Stratford, Conn., and Roxbury (her daughter being dead), left her son Thomas to care for the Roxbury estate, and with her sons John and William in company with sixteen other families removed to Stratford. William, subsequently, with many others founded Ancient Woodbury. From John⁷ sprang the Stratford, from Thomas⁷ the Roxbury, and from William⁷ the Woodbury Curtises. Many descendants of each, bearing the name, now occupy these towns. From Woodbury, at a very early date, some of the younger generations went to Vermont, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire. During the Revolutionary struggle more than eighty Curtises from Connecticut alone, as shown by the Connecticut Roster, were found battling with the colonists for liberty. The children of William and Elizabeth Eliot Curtis, born in London: John⁷, b 1611, d 1707, m Elizabeth Wells; Thomas, progenitor of the Roxbury Curtises; Phillip, killed by Indians, 1634, while assisting in rescuing children stolen by them; Mary d previous to 1652, unmarried, and William, progenitor of the Woodbury Curtises.

The rest of Celistia Curtis Loveland's pedigree will be found in Vol. I., Loveland Genealogy, pages 199-202. Lovina Levenworth was probably sister of Amos Levenworth mentioned in Cothorn's history of Woodbury. He had a daughter Lovina, b 1793.

At a meeting held in Stratford, Nov., 1658, lots were drawn for the undivided lands, and the third drawing was set off to the widow Curtis.--(See Orcutt's Stratford.)

The widow Curtis left Roxbury in company of 17 families who came by sea to found the new settlement at Stratford. John was 28 years old, and William 18.--(Drake's Roxbury.)

John was made Freeman and bought the Roxbury estate at his mother's death and gave it to his son Israel, whose descendants live there now (1894). The home is situated on Lamartine, near the Boylston station of the Boston and Providence R. R.

We are indebted to Miss Alice D. Depew, of Waterbury, Conn., for the above Curtis records, and other information which she selected from the Curtis Genealogy. Her grandmother, the wife of E. D. Loveland (Vol. III) was a Curtis. In Vol. III, her Curtis pedigree will be given as a supplement to the above. Other Curtises whose names are found in these volumes may be able to trace their descent. In Scribner's Monthly, vol. 19, p. 485, of Feb'y, 1880, is a picture of the Curtis house at Roxbury, built in 1638. The late George William Curtis was a far away relative, also Calvin Curtis, the artist.—A. D. D.

This family emigrated to the Pacific coast in 1851. They crossed the plains with ox teams, occupying six months in the journey. They arrived in Portland, Oregon, Oct. 15, 1851. Portland was then a small village. The Indians hindered their journey very much by stampeding teams and stealing horses. There were about twenty teams in the train, all ox teams except one of six horses owned by a man named Slow. The Indians stole all his horses at Goose Creek except one poor one, and he and his family had to depend on the others. At Snake River they had a skirmish with the Indians. No lives were lost. One man by the name of Kempler was hit in the arm, and his daughter Margaret received a bullet through her bonnet. After two weeks rest at Portland they went to Howell Prairie, where they remained until Dec. 12. From there they went to Salem, the capital. The next fall they went to Butte Creek and entered a donation claim of 320 acres. Mr. Bowman and his brother bought a saw mill and grist mill here. Farmers came thirty miles to mill. Flour was $25 a barrel; potatoes $5 a bushel. After four years stay in this place the family moved to Oregon City. Mr. Bowman was a stone cutter. After remaining here fourteen years they moved back to their farm where Mr. Bowman died. He and his wife united with the M. E. Church in Peoria. He was a faithful Christian. Seven or eight years later we find the family in Genesee, Idaho. Mrs. Bowman, though advanced in years, is still able to do her work. She is healthful and happy and her children all live near her.—JOSEPH S. BOWMAN.

JOSEPH⁶ BURTON, m 2d Aug. 17, 1890, Mrs. H. N. Kendall, nee Cynthia F. Daniels, b in Gaines, N. Y., Jan'y 23, 1827, d at Upper Alton, Ill., Oct. 10, 1892, buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis, Mo. She united with the Baptist Church at fourteen years of age. She was a strict Baptist and leading spirit in all Christian work until a short period before her marriage with Mr. Burton. She was a great Bible student, and like Mr. Burton became thoroughly convinced that it was her duty to withdraw from that church. It was this unity of thought that brought them together and led to their marriage. This Christian couple lived very happily together and in leaving the church of their first choice for a following more humble really made a great sacrifice. She was a woman of much force of character and had but few equals in intelligence.—J. B.

Born to Mr. Burton's adopted son: Ethel May⁷ Elwell, b at Upper Alton, July 25, 1892.

She was a pioneer's daughter from four years of age, and shared with the family the toils and privations of early frontier life. During her girlhood she attended school in Jacksonville and Lebanon and was a teacher for a time. She married Oct. 18, 1853, W. P. Whitlock, who died April 23, 1858. Again, Sept. 11, 1861, she married Dr. J. T. Dickerson, of Brighton. She bore him one son, Dr. L. M. Dickerson. Dec., 1893, she suffered an attack of la grippe, followed by pneumonia, which developed into consumption. She endured much suffering, but was tenderly cared for in her home by her devoted husband, son and daughter-in-law, who were ever ready to make any sacrifice for her comfort. During her lucid hours she often said she had no fears of death and trusted in the Saviour. She is remembered as a kind neighbor and faithful friend, and as one ever ready to perform acts of charity and benevolence. Thursday evening, Aug. 2, 1894, at half-past seven o'clock, she fell asleep to wake in that bright world of rest and peace.—From "In Memoriam," Brighton Paper.

We clip the following from the Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Colo., Dec. 18, 1894:

Of the great and sturdy men who first settled Colorado and waged victorious conflict with savage nature and savage men, the greatest of them passed "over the range" yesterday, when the breath ceased which bound the soul and body of W. A. H. Loveland into the admirable man. The career of Mr. Loveland is inseparably united with the history of Colorado. Not with any part of it that is small and trifling, but with every incident that was great and far-reaching, and is now recognized as an epoch in its advancement.

His school for the work of the early pioneer and the promotion of the great enterprises needed to subdue and populate a wild and isolated country, were the trials, vicissitudes and demands for moral and physical endurance which he successfully encountered on the field of action of the Mexican War. From the soldier to the frontiersman, from the frontiersman to the builder of cities, from that to the constructor of great lines of railway; mingling with the great monarchs of finance, the owner and director of a great daily newspaper, and the selection of his party for the highest office in the gift of the people of the State, is but a small section out of the long and useful life of this lamented citizen.

Sturdy in methods and character, indomitable in energy, unfailing in endurance, with high ambitions and great achievements in the business and political world, the best of his life, nevertheless, was that which was buried from the public and clustered beneath the social and family roof-tree. A more loving and tender husband never brought sunshine into a home, a more affectionate and conscientious father never wedded children to the refining influences of the family hearthstone. In love and forbearance, in marital and parental devotion, his was a character of sweetness and dignity and repose. A young grandson whose spirit was taken by the angels seven weeks ago had so woven the tendrils of his child nature about the heart of the man of oak that when they were snapped it gave his heart such a mighty wrench that it commenced to die and failed forever yesterday.

The State will sincerely mourn with the family of the dead. His death is the loss of the State as well as of the wife and children. One of the most useful and conspicuous builders of the commonwealth has rested forever from his labors, and the people who are now enjoying the fruits and their posterity will ever bear in honored memory the name of the departed benefactor.

From the Denver Times, Tuesday, Dec. 18, 1894:

W. A. H. Loveland, one of the most noted of Colorado pioneers, died at 1:45 P. M. yesterday at his rural home near Lakewood, a suburb of Denver. * * *

A no more glorious wreath can be laid upon the tomb of any man than that which symbolizes his leadership among Colorado pioneers. Such a wreath will mark the last resting place of all that is mortal of W. A. H. Loveland. Among all those who led in blazing the trail and later in clearing the road to Colorado's splendid achievements there were none who, in indomitable will, untiring energy or clear vision outranked Mr. Loveland.

In politics he was unwavering to his allegiance to Democracy, but above all else he was a patriotic citizen, true to the interests of state and nation. In private life he was without spot or blemish, true to a true man's every relation. As a pioneer, as a builder, as a business man he was farseeing and persevering, and behind it all was possessed of a breadth and vigor of mind which led to wide success. As a forerunner in mountain railroad construction; as a courageous manager in times of great financial depression; as a candidate for high office; as the owner of a great newspaper; as an energetic promoter of many and varied enterprises, and in all his relations as a man of affairs, Mr. Loveland passed unscathed by justifiable criticism.

A great man; a progressive man; a loyal and a loving and lovable man has gone from our midst, leaving a life's record which is a rich legacy to his family and a source of pride to his friends. His was a life well spent and a rest well earned.

From the Denver Republican, Tuesday, Dec. 18, 1891:

William A. H. Loveland, soldier, pioneer, railroad builder and ex-Lieutenant Governor of Colorado, died about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home in Lakewood. His passing away removes from the midst of the people one who watched by the cradle of Colorado, grew with her young strength and battled for her welfare in the field of industry, on the political platform, through the press and in the legislative halls. His death may be counted a public loss to the community which his untiring energy and broad public spiritedness did so much for, and he will be sincerely mourned by the many who loved him for his personal good qualities as a man and a friend.

In ex-Lieutenant Governor Loveland, Jefferson County possessed a most pronounced type of the men who built up her populous and prosperous city and opened the stores of wealth that lay buried in the foothills and canons, when the first pioneers settled upon the site of Golden and found nothing there but danger and hardship. Governor Loveland was of New England stock, having been born in Massachusetts, a state which has contributed to the West some of its noblest and most capable sons. He came to Colorado in 1859, when still a young man, and nearly all the active part of his life was spent within the boundaries of what now constitutes this state. He was active in whatever tended to promote the welfare and advancement of the community, and until comparatively recent years he was one of the leaders of the Democratic party. * * *

As the years go by the men who were foremost in making the foundations of this commonwealth lay down their burdens and leave the work of completing the superstructure to those who have come after them and who have reaped with them the harvest of their early labors. * * * Among the foremost and best of them was he whose death is now recorded.

THE DEAD PIONEER HONORED.

THE BODY OF W. A. H. LOVELAND BURIED YESTERDAY WITH RESPECT.

The funeral of ex-Lieutenant Governor Loveland was held yesterday from his late residence at Lakewood. Perfect arrangements were made in the way of railroad facilities to carry to the house of death the large number of men and women who knew and loved the Golden pioneer in life. * * * The engine was appropriately draped in black crepe. The Denver delegation to the funeral were mostly members of the Pioneer Society, and comprised some of the wealthiest and most respected men in Denver, many of them accompanied by their wives. The Denver mourners found the Loveland residence thronged when they arrived there. A special train had been run from Golden, bringing to the funeral the full strength of the Golden pioneers, as well as many others. * * * The casket, rich but without anything tawdry in its appearance, lay in the front parlor. It was of draped crepe, copper lined, and with textile extension bars. * * * The array of floral tributes made a bower of beauty and fragrance that almost hid the casket from view. One handsome piece was a large pillow of red and white roses and smilax, with the inscription "Father" traced across it in large letters of violets, selected by W. L. Loveland, who came from Chicago. Equally beautiful was a crown of varicolored roses, carnations and smilax, the tribute of Frank W. Loveland, ex-Governor Loveland's Denver son and his wife. The Golden Pioneers' Society sent a floral harp. There were numerous other tributes from friends and relatives and the Denver Ladies' Pioneer Society. The Rev. Dr. J. N. Freeman, of the First Presbyterian Church, conducted the funeral services. Dr. Freeman delivered a touching eulogy on the life, character and achievements of the dead pioneer. It was preceded by the rendition of "Jesus Lover of My Soul," by members of the choir. The hymn "Nearer my God to Thee" was sung, and then all present filed singly through the parlor to look their last upon the face of Golden's founder and their friend. The pall bearers were C. B. Kountze, Allison H. De France, Charles C. Welch, Henry C. Brown, E. L. Berthoud, William Ruth, W. N. Byers and J. S. Brown. Three men who fought in the Mexican War with William A. H. Loveland acted as honorary pall bearers. They were Brigadier General E. J. Brooks, H. F. Jones and Samuel P. Barbee. At 3 o'clock the long procession set out for Riverside Cemetery, where the body of the old pioneer was laid to rest.—Denver Republican, Dec. 21, 1894.
